

PRAVDA ASSAILS STALIN IN FIRST WORD TO PEOPLE OF NEW RED LINE

Dictator's Drive for Glory Harmed Cause, Party Paper Says — Swedish Premier to Visit Soviet Georgia.

MOSCOW, March 28 (AP)—The Communist party organ Pravda today published a broad-scale denunciation of Joseph Stalin as a man whose drive for glory took monstrous forms and harmed the Communist cause.

In a 7000-word article spread over 12 columns, the newspaper brought home to the Russian public for the first time the new Soviet leadership's campaign to chop down Stalin's historical stature.

The Soviet government announced, meanwhile, that Prime Minister Tage Erlander of neutral Sweden would tour Stalin's native Georgia and neighboring Armenia, where rioting has been reported as a result of the current Kremlin denunciation of the late Soviet dictator.

Indication All Is Quiet.
The announcement of the Swedish leader's tour was taken as an indication that all is quiet in the two southern republics and that the Soviet government felt it had nothing to hide there.

Erlander is scheduled to arrive in Moscow tomorrow on a good-will tour of the Soviet Union. He will leave for Georgia next Wednesday, spend the night in the resort town of Sukhumi, the next day in Tiflis and Friday in Yerevan, Armenia, the Soviet announcement said.

The campaign to destroy the Stalin myth was touched off by Communist party boss Nikita S. Khrushchev last month in a secret address to the party's twentieth congress. The gist of his remarks was circulated in a letter by the central committee and by word of mouth to Communist groups in Russia and abroad.

The program had become generally known outside Russia, heralded by public attacks on the "cult of the individual."

But Pravda's broadside was the first public expression at home of the campaign against Stalin personally.

Tribute to Early Years.
Pravda paid tribute to Stalin's work in the first years after Lenin's death.

"But then certain features and qualities began gradually to appear in Stalin's practice of leadership which later developed into the cult of the individual," Pravda charged.

"The gigantic successes in building a new society, achieved by the Soviet people under the leadership of the Communist party, on the basis of laws of history discovered by Marxism-Leninism, were strongly attributed to one man—Stalin."

He, lacking personal modesty, did not cut short the glorifications and praises addressed to him, but supported and encouraged them in every way.

"As time went on, this cult of the individual assumed even more monstrous forms and did serious harm to the cause."

The Pravda article made no mention of the most sensational charges which reports reaching the West have said the new Soviet high command has leveled against their former chief—that he maintained a continuous reign of terror, murdered thousands of his party associates and the flower of the Red army officer corps and placed the nation in danger of conquest by Hitler.

On Right Track Now.
Pravda assured the Russian people that the Soviet Union now is on the right track.

It said the Communist party is the leader and organizer of the Soviet people "and the col-

MOVE TO LIMIT TAXES NEEDS ONLY ONE MORE STATE TO FORCE ACTION

CHICAGO, March 28 (UP)—A MOVE for a proposed constitutional amendment to limit the maximum federal income tax rate to 25 or 35 per cent was one state shy today, the Western Tax Council reported.

The council said the thirty-first state, South Carolina, approved a petition to Congress yesterday for such an amendment.

A petition signed by 32 states is needed to force Congress to submit an amendment for ratification.

Thirty-six states must ratify an amendment before it becomes law.

Most of the state petitions call for a 25 per cent income tax limit, while some have gone as high as 35 per cent.

States which approved the action earlier were Alabama, Arkansas, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Mississippi, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Texas, Utah, Virginia, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

At least two states, Maine and Nebraska, have voted to rescind their action.

Today's indictment accused the individuals named of conspiring to allocate bids on surplus cotton so as to eliminate competition among themselves.

The department said the following corporations were named in the indictment: Weil Brothers-Cotton, Inc., Montgomery, Ala.; J. A. Baker & Co. and Pell Cotton Co., both of Charlotte, N.C.; E. F. Creekmore Co., Inc., New Orleans; and A. Campdera & Co., Inc., Sternberg-Martin Co., R. L. Dixon & Co., all of Dallas, Tex.

The individuals named as defendants were: Morris Wolf, also known as Pete Wolf, New Orleans, owner of Wolf & Co., a spot cotton brokerage business, and John P. Godchaux, New Orleans, associated with Wolf, R. O. Beach Sr., Houston, Tex., and Robert D. McCallum, Memphis, Tenn., partners in the cotton firm of George H. McCadden and Bro.

The grand jury charged that this group maintained Wolf & Co. as a common purchasing agent, permitted Wolf to allocate bids on CCC cotton among them and to fix the bid prices to be submitted for the surplus supplies.

They were also charged with efforts to eliminate or discourage other firms from competing with Wolf & Co.

8 COTTON FIRMS INDICTED UNDER ANTI-TRUST ACT

Four Individuals Also Charged With Collusive
Bidding for Surplus Cotton.

WASHINGTON, March 28 (AP)—Attorney General Brownell today announced the indictment of eight corporations and four individuals on charges of collusive bidding for government-held surplus cotton.

He said the indictment was returned under the Sherman anti-trust act by a federal grand jury at New Orleans.

The Department of Justice said those named as defendants bought about 60 per cent of the more than $40,000,000 worth of surplus cotton sold by Commodity Credit Corporation in 1954 and 1955.

The CCC, a government agency, handles the price support program for cotton, disposing of surplus on a competitive bid basis.

Today's indictment accused the individuals named of conspiring to allocate bids on surplus cotton so as to eliminate competition among themselves.

Government Using Tax
Party Must Pay Claims or Open Books in Court.

By JAMES DEAKIN
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, March 28—In a renewed attempt to force the Communist party of the United States to disclose its finances on the ground that it is a political conspiracy rather than a political party, the Government has selected a new weapon in its tax power.

This is the apparent meaning of yesterday's series of raids by Internal Revenue Service agents on offices of the party and its official newspaper, the Daily Worker.

By regarding the American Communist party as an agent of international Communism, the Government draws a distinction between it and the Republican and Democratic parties, which are not subject to taxation.

Disclosure of Finances.
Unless the party and the newspaper agree to pay the federal claims of $435,314 in alleged income tax deficiencies, ultimate effect of the seizure of the party's assets will be to compel it to disclose its finances in court.

If the Government succeeds in forcing this disclosure, it will have accomplished one of the main objectives of an April 20, 1953, ruling by the Subversive Activities Control Board. This ruling has been challenged by the party, and an appeal is pending before the Supreme Court.

The precise legal justification for yesterday's action remained an unsettled question, and a matter of some official confusion today.

1953 SACB Ruling.
In the 1953 ruling, the Subversive Activities Control Board found that the American Communist party was a Communist action organization as defined by the Internal Security Act of 1950.

The SACB ruling was upheld by the United States Court of Appeals. It has been argued before the Supreme Court, and a final decision is expected soon.

If the Supreme Court upholds the ruling, Attorney General Brownell said yesterday that this would compel the party to register its officers and membership and subject it to certain control, including disclosure of its finances.

The same financial disclosure probably would be accomplished if the party takes yesterday's action into the courts. It will have 60 days in which to decide whether to pay the claims or go to court, an Internal Revenue spokesman said.

Commissioner of Internal Revenue Russell C. Harrison said the income tax case against the Communist party was "being handled precisely as any other similar taxpayer matter would be handled."

Confers With Moysey.
Harrison conferred on an hour today with Donald R. Moysey, district director of internal revenue for Lower Manhattan, then issued a brief statement on yesterday's surprise raids by Internal Revenue agents on Communist party headquarters in New York.

Moysey "came down from New York this morning to fill me in on the details of the seizures of Communist properties in several cities which took place yesterday," the statement said.

"I can assure you that this case is being handled precisely as any other similar taxpayer matter would be handled by the Internal Revenue Service under its obligation to enforce the revenue laws."

Officials here conveyed the impression that Harrison had little or no prior knowledge of the crackdown on the party and that Moysey planned the raids without consulting federal agencies in Washington.

Harrison refused to elaborate on the written statement, and Moysey declined to answer reporters' questions as he went from one office to another to explain his action to Revenue Service officials.

Apparent Surprise.
The raids apparently came as a complete surprise to Harrison and his assistant, Moysey, who was summoned to Washington for the conference with the newly-appointed commissioner.

A reorganization of the Revenue Service three years ago gave district directors almost complete autonomous power, and for this reason Revenue Service officials here were not publicly questioning Moysey's authority, but they appeared anxious to get the details.

Moysey was understood to have taken full responsibility for the seizures, saying he had asked other district directors throughout the country to look for assets of the Communist party and file tax liens in the series of simultaneous raids.

He said in New York he acted under a law that allows a tax collector to seize assets when he

NEW SOVIET PLAN FOR DISARMING SAID TO INCLUDE AIR INSPECTION

Qualifications Reported in Program Similar to Eisenhower's — Five-Nation Parley Discusses It.

LONDON, March 28 (AP)—The Soviet Union offered a disarmament plan embracing President Eisenhower's aerial inspection system with qualifications, an authoritative American source said tonight.

This proposal was discussed at an animated session of the five-nation disarmament conference here under United Nations auspices.

The informant stressed that the Soviet plan still left a great many questions unanswered.

The United States delegation will attempt to get a closer definition of these points next week and will also define the American disarmament plan in more detail.

ATOMIC WEAPONS AVOIDED IN PLAN

LONDON, March 28 — The Soviet Union has proposed a disarmament plan whose emphasis rests almost entirely on East-West cuts in military manpower and in conventional weapons.

The new Soviet plan said almost nothing about abolishing existing stocks of nuclear weapons or halting or even regulating their future production. The only reference to nuclear weapons suggested prohibiting further nuclear tests.

Prior to this the Soviet Union has demanded an outright ban on nuclear stockpiles and prohibition in production before it would even consider reducing its armed strength.

Western observers believed the Soviet thesis revealed that the Soviet Union either has or, equally important, believes it has, enough nuclear weapons to inflict as much damage on its potential Western enemies as they could on Russia.

'Deepfreeze' of Stockpiles.
Consequently, according to this theory, it wants to "deepfreeze" its own nuclear stockpiles and concentrate almost exclusively on conventional disarmament in the talks here.

This is almost identical to the policy the United States delegation under Harold E. Stassen, chief delegate, has been pursuing.

The Soviet proposals were introduced yesterday by Andrei A. Gromyko, chief Soviet delegate, at the fifth session of the current meeting of the United Nations subcommittee on disarmament. The talks opened March 19 among the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain, France and Canada, which make up the subcommittee.

The Soviet proposals were grouped under these major headings:

1. A three-year disarmament period involving the five nations in the disarmament subcommittee. Each would "freeze" its existing forces, conventional arms, stockpiles and military budgets.

The United States and the Soviet Union would gradually reduce their forces to 1,500,000 men each, Britain and France to 650,000 men each, Canada, with very small forces, would reduce proportionately.

2. A United Nations control organ would be created to regulate disarmament and to inspect conventional military facilities in the territories of the participating powers involving, for instance, barracks, arms depots, arsenals. No mention was made about nuclear facilities, informants said. Germany would become a sort of "trial" disarmament zone and all the powers would agree not to keep nuclear weapons there.

Finally, these steps would eventually in East-West disarmament, not fully defined in the Soviet thesis, which would prohibit all further nuclear tests.

It seemed apparent to Western delegates that the Soviet plan had been carefully prepared independently of either the comprehensive British-French disarmament plan introduced on the opening day or the four separate "confidence building" proposals put forward by Stassen in subsequent meetings.

Gromyko was said to have made it clear that the British-French stage-by-stage disarmament program calling for conventional arms reductions and then a total ban on nuclear weapons "did not provide the answer to the 10-year stalemate on disarmament" among the great powers.

No Reference to U.S.
He is said to have made no reference, however, to the United States proposals. These suggested a mutual reduction in military manpower to 2,500,000 men each for the United States and the Soviet Union, a pooling of advance information on projected troop movements outside national territories, the creation of "test" disarmament areas of 20,000 to 30,000 square miles in both the Soviet Union and the United States and the exchange of technical disarmament missions among the five nations here.

U.S. FAILURE TO PUSH TAX CASES AGAINST TRUMAN'S AIDS SPURS JURY PROTEST

More Policemen Needed to Stop
Rise in Crime, Board Head Says
Long Asserts Department Is 146 Men
Short, Expresses Chief Concern Over Crimes Against Persons.

An increase in crimes involving property has reached alarming proportions, and the only way to stop it is to increase the number of policemen, President L. A. Long of the Board of Police Commissioners said today.

The police department is 146 men short of the authorized quota of 2010. A new class of recruits is expected to begin training in May or June, but it probably will produce only 50 to 60 new officers, Long added.

Long said the department would continue to concentrate its efforts on protection of persons.

A "tremendous" increase in the number of policemen would be necessary to accomplish a major reduction of crimes involving property, the head of the police board said, contending that the city would have to be practically blanketed with officers.

All larcenies, regardless of how small the amount of money or the value of the loot, are recorded as major crimes for statistical purposes, in line with the reporting procedure of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Long questioned that requirement, asserting that it tended to distort the real situation, since the number of smaller thefts is relatively large.

The total of major crimes in January and February was 5099, compared with 5536 in those months last year.

REPORT CHARGES M'KAY SUBVERTS LAWS ON POWER

Secretary, Aids Accused of 'Rush to Thwart Program as Established by Congress.'

By EDWARD F. WOODS
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, March 28—A House committee has prepared a report charging Secretary of the Interior Douglas McKay and two other top officials of the department of "willfully" subverting federal laws on public power, the Post-Dispatch learned today.

In addition to McKay, the report names Under Secretary Clarence A. Davis and Assistant Fred G. Andahol. Of all three the report says that "such matters as congressional intent, objective analysis and fair dealing are of little concern to them in their rush to cripple and thwart a sound federal power program as established by Congress."

To Be Made Public Soon.
The report, scheduled to be made public soon by the House Committee on Government Operations, says that the committee believes that "if these public officials feel they cannot carry out in good faith the laws they have sworn to uphold, they should resign their offices and be replaced by men who will do so."

McKay has submitted his resignation to run for the Republican nomination for Senator in Oregon.

The report is based on hearings conducted last year by a subcommittee headed by Representative Earl Chudoff (Dem., Pennsylvania).

The report attacks a number of actions intended, the report says, to defeat the public power program established by Congress before the Eisenhower Administration came to power.

These include what the report describes as suppression by the Interior Department of an important opinion by the Attorney General favorable to rural electric co-operatives, an attempt to push through the Dixie-Yates plan to stifle the Tennessee Valley Authority, an attempt to wreck the federal-REA co-operative power integration.

'School Phobia' Makes Pupils Sick, Experts Say; It's No Joke

WASHINGTON, March 28 (AP)—Johnny gets sick and loses his breakfast. Told by his mother he doesn't have to go to school, he quickly gets well.

He is suffering, two psychologists said today, from "school phobia"—and it's no joke.

Pauline B. Hahn and Samuel Waldinger of the Judge Baker Guidance Center, Boston, in a paper prepared for the American School Counselors Association, defined school phobia as "a result of a morbid dread of . . . the teacher, the other children, the janitor eating in the lunch room or some other aspect."

EMPHASIS SAID TO HAVE SHIFTED FROM CHARGES OF OBSTRUCTION

Judge Moore Refers
Justice Department
Attorneys Try to Keep Report Secret.

Failure of the Justice Department to seek indictments of high Government officials in the Truman Administration who allegedly obstructed prosecution of income-tax evaders was one of the chief causes for an unprecedented formal complaint made by the federal grand jury here yesterday, the Post-Dispatch learned today.

After receiving the jury's report that the tax scandal inquiry has been stalled, United States District Judge George H. Moore, who also has been critical of the lack of progress, immediately referred the matter to Attorney General Herbert Brownell in Washington.

Because the jury asked for instructions, Judge Moore requested that a copy of the report be sent to Brownell so the Attorney General can advise the judge of "his plans and purposes." The judge said he will then advise the jury what course to follow.

Members of the jury expect that, as a consequence of the jury's complaint, action in the form of additional indictments will be forthcoming soon, it was learned.

The indictments might include obstruction of justice charges as well as income tax evasion, jurors were said to believe.

Attorneys Surprised.
The report caught Justice Department attorneys by surprise when it was presented in open court yesterday afternoon, and an unsuccessful effort was made by them to keep it from becoming public immediately. Judge Moore rejected the request.

In its report, the jury listed several objections to the manner in which the Justice Department is conducting the tax-scandal inquiry, particularly in shifting the course of the investigation.

The jurors complained that the emphasis in recent months had shifted from an investigation of obstruction of justice by high Government officials to consideration of other tax cases which never have been explored fully.

"Whether this shift in emphasis was due to policy decisions of the Justice Department, individual beliefs of attendant personnel, or for any other reason is not known to us," the jurors said. "We do feel, however, that this change was not in accord with our wishes and in the best interests of the completion of our duties."

Ex-Officials Referenced.
The jury's reference was to a phase of the inquiry in which it felt the Government had built up a strong obstruction of justice case against a number of important officials in the Truman administration.

Instead of pressing for indictments, however, Justice Department attorneys switched the investigation to other fields, bringing in evidence against what the jury considered "small fry," as compared with the "big fish."

The jury complained to Judge Moore that present plans are for it to recess at the end of tomorrow's session and reconvene at the closing of a trial scheduled to begin May 7.

"This recess, we are told, is in the best interests of defendants and the Government in this forthcoming trial as well as for other reasons," the report said.

It is our belief that in the time remaining of our term the best interests of justice and the substance and spirit of the court's original charge can best be served by a dual approach to the problem.

The grand jury won a partial victory today when Government attorneys agreed to bring the jury back next Tuesday instead of recessing, as planned, after tomorrow's session.

The jurors, whose term normally would expire this month but is expected to be continued until July, told Judge Moore: "Most of all we want the court to know that we feel the tax scandal investigation should be actively continued at the present time to cover as much ground as feasible before expiration of our present term of office."

Moreover, we want to see the evidence already partially developed of an apparent definite conspiracy to obstruct justice fully and promptly exposed.

The Post-Dispatch disclosed Jan. 20 that there was a long-standing resentment by grand jury members against what they

PRESIDENT ENDS PARLEY, HURRIES TO CAPITAL FOR DULLES MEETING

Associate Describes It as Very Important—North American Top Executives Adjourn on Cordial Note.

WASHINGTON, March 28 (AP)—President Eisenhower returned here today from the North American big three conference in White Sulphur Springs, W.Va., and hurried to the White House where an associate said he had "a very important meeting" set up with Secretary of State Dulles.

The President's special train pulled in at 2:15 p.m. St. Louis time. His brother, Dr. Milton Eisenhower, president of Pennsylvania State University, and his physician, Maj. Gen. Howard Snyder, accompanied him on the automobile ride to the executive offices.

The associate, who asked not to be named, told of the Eisenhower-Dulles date as the train made an operating stop at Charlottesville, Va.

Mr. Eisenhower concluded a round of conferences with Mexico's President Adolfo Ruiz Cortines and Canada's Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent in the West Virginia resort this morning.

Dulles flew back to the capital earlier today.

Invitation Renewed. St. Laurent was the first to leave the conference scene at the Greenbrier Hotel.

"I hope you found it worth while," the President responded. "I hope we can do it again some time, and if we do it again, we'll do it right here."

St. Laurent, flying in a Canadian DC-3 transport, reached Washington in about an hour, en route back to Ottawa.

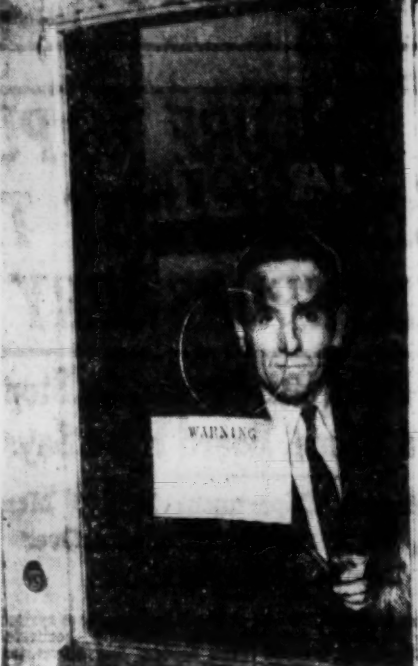

Mr. Eisenhower walked out to Ruiz Cortines' car, chatting with the Mexican president, to bid him farewell.

Dulles left by plane soon after Mr. Eisenhower himself started back by train at 9:30 a.m. The President had planned to fly but switched his travel plans after he learned last night that thunderstorms might make flying hazardous.

Dulles, on arrival in Washington, described the meeting in the mountain resort as "wonderful."

"It is a hard conference to report on," Dulles said, "because we did not try to produce any concrete results but to produce an atmosphere which would make it easier to get concrete results."

the whip to keep people in check.

Hagerty's Interpretation. Highlights of the discussions were outlined by spokesmen for the conference—Hagerty, Canadian press officer Robert Farquharson, and Justo Sierra, press attaché at Mexican Embassy in Washington.

"The feeling of those in the room was that our three countries—the United States, Canada and Mexico—should do everything they can to let other sections of the free world and the new nations know that the three of us stand ready to give them any moral or economic aid we can, at their request," Hagerty said.

They agreed that it was vitally important that the United States, Mexico and Canada point out to these new nations that in one form or another they have been colonial countries and in one form or another have worked out their own solutions and established independence and democracy.

"We have thus had the same experiences which the other, more recently free nations have had, and we want to be their friends and to aid them as much as we can."

Slight Distinction Made. The New York Times quoted Sierra as saying that for Mexico it was "a pleasure to give any moral help to any country that is trying to fight for their independence and to be free nations."

The Times said Hagerty, however, explained that the offer of aid from the North American countries was directed only to "established countries."

Mr. Eisenhower played 12 more holes of golf yesterday with Sammy Snead, Bernard Shanley, a White House secretary, and Gary Nixon, assistant pro at the Greenbrier.

They finished as darkness was falling on the course.

A dinner last night ended the conference activities.

The New York Times News Service. (Copyright 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON, March 28—The Senate yesterday swept back under the rug for at least another year all attempts to revise the electoral college system by which Presidents and vice presidents are elected.

It did so by a shouted vote which sent back to the Judiciary Committee for further study a handful of constitutional amendments that sought to make the electoral vote more reflective of the popular vote.

Prior to this final action the senators had decisively defeated five of these amendments by roll-call votes. They were:

1. An amendment by Senator Price Daniel (Dem.), Texas, that would have set up two alternative plans for distributing the electoral vote, either on a proportional basis, or on a congressional district basis.

This amendment received a majority of 48 to 37, but since the Constitution requires that a constitutional amendment must receive a two-thirds vote of the senators present, it failed of passage.

2. An amendment by Senator William Langer (Rep.), North Dakota, that would have abolished the electoral college, directed that Presidential nominees be selected in a nationwide primary, and provided that the winner be selected by direct popular vote. It was beaten 9 to 13.

3. An amendment by Senator Herbert H. Lehman (Dem.), New York, that would have provided for direct popular election of Presidents, but without the national primary proposed in Senator Langer's amendment. This lost 66 to 17.

4. An amendment by Senator Hubert H. Humphrey (Dem.), Minnesota, that would have given each state two electoral votes on the basis of its population, and then divided the remaining 435 national electoral total in proportion to the popular vote. It was defeated by a voice vote.

5. An amendment by Senator Clifford Case (Rep.), New Jersey, that would have amended Senator Daniel's amendment to make the electoral vote of each state depend on the percentage of its eligible voters who went to the polls in the previous election. It lost 66 to 20.

Senator Daniel's amendment, the major proposal before the Senate in more than a week of general debate, would have apportioned a state's electoral votes to the three top candidates for President in a ratio based on their share of the popular vote.

As an alternative to that, it would have permitted state legislatures, if they so desired, to have electors selected as senators and representatives are elected. Thus, two would be elected by state-wide popular vote, as senators are elected, with the remainder selected on the basis of the popular majorities in each congressional district.

BRITISH PATROL AMBUSHED, TWO KILLED IN CYPRUS

Village Under Curfew After Attack—Penalty Imposed in Bombing in Limassol.

NICOSIA, Cyprus, March 28 (AP)—Cypriot rebels firing automatic weapons ambushed a British patrol last night and killed two British military policemen.

The attack came only a few hours after the British governor, Field Marshal Sir John Harding, appealed for an end to violence on this east Mediterranean island. He said the return of peace would "lay the foundation of a modern and efficient country."

In the past year Greek Cypriots seeking union with Greece have killed 62 persons including 24 British soldiers. A customs official of Greek descent was killed yesterday in Limassol port.

The British patrol was ambushed near Phrenaros village in the Famagusta area of East Cyprus.

The British immediately imposed a curfew of Phrenaros's 1000 inhabitants. Vassilia, where Cypriots of Greek and Turkish origin clashed March 19, also is under curfew.

Entertainment places in Limassol were closed after a bomb exploded there without damage.

In other bombing incidents, a British soldier's house was damaged at Famagusta and a British military vehicle was attacked near Lefka village. A patrol wounded and captured a 13-year-old boy after the Lefka incident.

portioned a state's electoral votes to the three top candidates for President in a ratio based on their share of the popular vote.

As an alternative to that, it would have permitted state legislatures, if they so desired, to have electors selected as senators and representatives are elected. Thus, two would be elected by state-wide popular vote, as senators are elected, with the remainder selected on the basis of the popular majorities in each congressional district.

The decision to scuttle all proposals for electoral reform came quickly after the vote on the Daniel amendment disclosed that it lacked sufficient strength to meet the constitutional two-thirds requirement.

Senator Daniel made the recommitment motion on behalf of himself and Senator Kennedy, and the Senate shouted it through.

New Missile 'Czar' Will Seek Long-Range, Ballistic Weapon

To Have Increased Authority in Developing Nuclear Arms in Race With Reds.

By BRIG. GEN. THOMAS R. PHILLIPS, U.S.A. (Ret.) Military Analyst of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 28—Eger V. Murphree, appointed yesterday by Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson, will have more authority than anyone previously has had in the guided missile program.

Murphree, who comes on a leave of absence from his old job and will serve without compensation, will devote major emphasis to missiles of the long-range type, especially ballistic missiles. Wilson's announcement said. It is in this type that the United States is generally believed to be behind the Soviet Union.

Wilson told his press conference yesterday that Murphree would be given enough authority to get the job done. Thus he will have more authority than K. T. Keller, former Chrysler executive, who served as special assistant to the Secretary of Defense under former secretaries of defense.

Present legislation permits the Defense Department to make use of 10 individuals without remuneration and Murphree is serving under this. Wilson said he would not be required to divest himself of his stock holdings.

Available for One Year. Murphree, of whom Wilson said the Defense Department is very fortunate to secure his services, has been made available for one year by Eugene Holman, president of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, the parent organization of Esso Research & Engineering Co.

Wilson said that he hoped Murphree could get the job done without too much trouble in his year of service. He did not indicate, however, that he expected the United States to have either the intermediate range or intercontinental range ballistic missile completed within that time.

The Department of Defense directive that establishes a special assistant to the Secretary of Defense for guided missiles states that the special assistant "will be responsible for the direction and co-ordination of all activities in the Department of Defense connected with the research, development, engineer-

CRUISER SHELLS ALGERIAN AREA, LANDS MARINES

French Forces Also Go by Helicopter to Join in Attack on Rebel Fortress Near Colo.

ALGIERS, March 28 (AP)—French military authorities reported today that the heavy cruiser Georges Leygues had launched the first amphibious operation of the 16-month-old Algerian rebellion.

The cruiser sent marine commandos ashore to attack a rebel fortress on the isolated coast near Colo, in the Philippeville region, after bombarding the area with its 8-inch guns.

French army forces arrived by helicopter to join the first "combined" operation of the war.

The coastal area is heavily forested and has no roads connecting it with the interior. There was no immediate report of casualties or of the progress of the operation.

Military authorities reported stepped-up fighting in other areas as French reinforcements continued to arrive in Algeria. In the Constantine and Kabylie districts sharp engagements yesterday left about 60 rebels and four French soldiers dead.

The French also reported continuing fighting in southern Tunisia near the Algerian frontier. A heavy French mop-up drive started last week against a strong band of rebels there.

The French are reported to have about 3500 troops fighting the bands, and attempting to end smuggling of arms. The French claim the rebel army supply line runs from Libya across Tunisia into the Aurès mountain area of Algeria.

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization's permanent council in Paris last night backed France's transfer of two mechanized divisions to Algeria from NATO defense lines in West Germany.

The French have announced elements of the divisions are already on the way to Algeria. The exact number of men involved has not been disclosed.

ing and production of guided missiles, except those types already adopted for service use."

Five to 10 on Staff. Murphree is authorized to employ staff as may be required and as approved by the Secretary of Defense. Wilson estimated that the new special assistant's staff would be from five to 10. He is expected also to use the staffs of existing agencies.

There are more than 30 missile projects in the three services. Two different approaches are being made on the four major elements of both the intermediate range and intercontinental ballistic missile. In view of the complication and magnitude of the missile projects, it is difficult to see how Murphree will be able to influence them greatly for some time.

New obligatory authority for missile procurement for fiscal year 1957 is being asked for in the amount of $1,776,000,000. In addition, several hundred million dollars more of guided missile funds is included in research and development requests.

Murphree will find himself in the middle of several service fights over who develops and uses missiles.

When asked what would happen if Murphree got caught in the service differences, Wilson said: "If he gets into a jam between the services, I shall be in it, too."

BAUGHMAN ASKS REZONING TO PUT FUEL TANKS NEAR AIR TERMINAL

County Planner Wants Gasoline Stored South of Natural Bridge —
Big Trucks Hauling It Now.

A recommendation that the St. Louis county council rezone a three-acre tract for installation of eight above-ground gasoline tanks to serve the new airport terminal building at Lambert-St. Louis Field was made today by M. Eugene Baughman, St. Louis county planning director.

In a letter to the council, Baughman recommended that the tract, across Natural Bridge road from the terminal, be rezoned from single family to light industrial. He suggested also rezoning 17 adjoining acres from residential to business.

Baughman said he was making the proposal in an effort to expedite action on the request by the city of St. Louis to obtain approval of that site for the gasoline tanks.

A legal opinion would be necessary for the county council, for as whether above-ground gas storage tanks can be located in a light industrial area, Baughman said. He added the city has taken the position the tanks, with a capacity of 500,000 gallons, can be located in a light industrial area.

Residents Object.
Baughman said that the other 17 acres could be made into parking lots and used for other airport purposes. Installation of the tanks, which would be 17 feet high, has been a point of controversy, with nearby residents objecting and urging that another storage area be selected.

Meanwhile, temporary means of supplying gasoline to the new terminal building continued today. Conway B. Briscoe, director of public utilities, said that engineering studies would be made to determine the most efficient means of handling movement of gasoline trucks from fuel storage areas in Robertson to the new terminal.

Briscoe and David Leigh, airport manager, met yesterday with representatives of airlines to work out improvements in the temporary system of moving the trucks agreed to last Saturday.

Under that arrangement, six trucks with a maximum axle weight of 21,500 pounds are being operated over about two and one-half miles of state highway, Briscoe said. State law permits 18,000 pounds axle weight, and Missouri highway officials have granted permission on a temporary basis for the trucks to move on the highway from Robertson to the terminal, Briscoe added.

Could Reduce Load.
He explained that the trucks could move with a reduced load to meet state law but that they then would not be carrying enough fuel to meet the needs of the larger airlines.

At present there is no serious problem in movement of 12 other gasoline trucks serving the airlines, he added.

Leigh said the movement of trucks in the runway areas under control of two-way radio is working smoothly and is under constant check for strict adherence to safety measures.

Briscoe said the present temporary movement of the gasoline trucks "could go on indefinitely" providing the state continues permitting the 21,500-axle-weight trucks to move over the short stretch of highway.

However, he indicated city officials and the airlines sought in their lengthy meeting yesterday for some interim solution for movement of the trucks that would be more acceptable to all parties concerned.

'Diamond Badges' for School Board Featured in Gridiron Dinner Sketch

High and Mighty Are Lamponed at Annual Advertising Club Fun Event—But National Politics Are Avoided by Satirists in Election Year.

By WILLIAM WYANT JR.
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

The Advertising Club of St. Louis lamponed the high and mighty, and took another irreverent glance at the contemporary scene, in its twentieth annual gridiron dinner last night at Hotel Sheraton-Jefferson.

In this presidential election year, the club's satirists avoided national politics, concentrating on targets closer at hand. Scene of the bar-tossing was, as usual, the Gold Room of the hotel.

Gov. Phil M. Donnelly and Mayor Raymond R. Tucker joined the more than 500 formally-attired guests who attended the traditional stag dinner. Most guests paid $30 for an evening's fun that included a seven-course dinner, starting with stuffed lobster and ending with well-stuffed diners.

Among the objects of the club's disrespectful satire were Gov. Donnelly and Mayor Tucker themselves, the St. Louis police, the Board of Education, the United States Navy jet plane fiasco and the frenetic competition of automobile dealers.

Newspapers Are Targets.
The club also satirized, among other things, both major St. Louis newspapers and some of their television personalities.

Lumie F. Matthews, the fundraising activities of universities, the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., the St. Louis Cardinals and the situation regarding severe, or lack thereof, in the Maline Creek area.

The opening sketch, called "Sex-Tette from Teresa," was a broad lampon based on allegations that some St. Louis policemen had taken bribes from brothel-keepers. Four "of-ficers" in Sam Browne belts cavorted about the stage, displaying large quantities of folding money.

"Boys, ya know this is really the life," said one actor, "knew our job. I never realized protection ever paid off like this."

As the "policemen" talked over their good fortune, they blithely ignored citizens being strong-armed by thugs. Then they sang a parody of the Policeman's Song from "Pirates of Penzance."

When a copper's not engaged in doing copping.
And a parlor for massage is near at hand,
Sure, he wants to get himself in on the pay-off.
If it's nothing more than just a lousy "grand."

'Tucker, the Lone Ranger.'
Mayor Tucker's troubles with the Board of Aldermen over adoption of a new city charter were the theme of a western sketch that depicted the Mayor as "Two Gun Tucker, the Lone Ranger," faced with the task of cleaning out a nest of aldermanic outlaws.

The aldermen's hangout was a saloon styled "Mc and Beers Bar." This could have been a reference to the fact that James H. McAttee, Democratic city committeeman, has a bar and restaurant on Twelfth boulevard. In any event, the gridiron aldermen, all two-gun men themselves, were plotting against the Lone Ranger's progressive views.

A wandering minstrel in the barroom, played by Charlie Beintker, expressed the spirit of progress and Tuckerism when he advanced with his guitar and sang a parody of "The Streets of Laredo," beginning as follows:

As I walked out in the streets
Of St. Louis,
As I walked out in St. Louis
One day;
I could see that the city was dying by inches
And the alderman gang had just stood in its way.

Oh beat the drums slowly, and play the life lowly, Play the dead march as we're drifting along For we need a new charter and it's no time to barter.

Or in 20 more years the whole town will be gone.

Kaufmann Is Tonto.
Cheers and applause came from the gridiron guests as the Lone Ranger and Tonto, his faithful Indian companion, rushed in to smoke out the joint.

The role of Tonto was ascribed to Aloys P. Kaufmann, president of the Chamber of Commerce of Metropolitan St. Louis.

Robert G. Stolz, chairman of the dinner committee, presided. Lambert Kauman was director of the sketches and Philip A.

Schaefer was producer. George Bilyeu served as stage manager. Ed Berg as technical director and Bill Engelbrecht as the man in charge of costumes and props.

Introductory remarks for the 15 sketches were provided by Bruce Hayward and Rex Davis as masters of ceremonies. Their faces were made up in diabolical fashion. The devil motif reached its climax, perhaps, when a procession of waiters brought in the desert course—chocolate praline-homme glace—with an illuminated Memphis-tophees riding the trencher.

Diamond Badges.
In a skit on the St. Louis Board of Education, members of the board were revealed in academic caps and gowns, talking over their plans for a new diamond-studded identification badge, arguing about the menu for a lavish supper, and jettisoning recommendations for an efficiency survey.

"We decided on oysters Rockefeller," a member reported concerning the supper. "Chateaubriand a la Maxine with truffles and cherries jubilee. But then we ran into a snag. The committee can't decide whether to have Piper Heidsieck champagne, vintage 1923, or G. H. Mumm champagne, vintage 1927."

Gov. Donnelly was the target of a sketch in which one of his speeches was "interpreted" by a certain Archibald McGonigle, said to have been brought to St. Louis at great expense from the United Nations. The Governor took the lambasting in good part.

Underpowered Jets.
One of the funniest satires dealt with the underpowered Navy jet fighters produced by McDonnell Aircraft Corp. The planes had to be towed from the plant to river barges.

In the skit, an operator of "McDonnell Control Tower" kept in radio contact with the "pilot" of a tractor, dragging one of the planes through the streets.

The annual Veiled Prophet Ball telecast by Frank Eschen of Post-Dispatch Station KSD-TV and Marjorie Wilten, was lamponed. The two were portrayed as they made running comment on a football game, concentrating on social notes and never getting around to mentioning which team was ahead.

"The Princeton, Ark., players," the actor portraying Mrs. Wilten said, "are attired in their school colors, buttercup and chartreuse, adding to the breathtaking splendor of winter colors. One note of interest, the Calico Cats are not wearing shoulder pads, a really daring departure..."

In another skit, the Globe-Democrat was satirized for its withdrawal of the cartoon strip "Orphan Annie" and the Post-Dispatch was lamponed for emphasis on presenting national and international news.

Bill of Fare.
In addition to items of fare already mentioned, the gridiron dinner last night included green turtle soup, Caribbe, with cheese straws; filet of English sole, Cardinale; filet mignon Richelieu, and assorted vegetables. Wines were sherry, bordeaux and champagne, topped off by a liqueur called Irish mist.

When gridiron guests gathered for cocktails before dinner, they were greeted by a display contending that St. Louis needs better airline service. A backdrop showed Lambert-St. Louis field as a cowpasture. A huge photograph of Charles A. Lindbergh had a caption indicating he was the "last man to fly non-stop to St. Louis."

Dr. Yang Yung-ching Dies.
NEW YORK, March 28 (AP)—Dr. Yang Yung-ching, former president of Soochow University in China, died in Shanghai March 26. The Methodist Board of Missions announced. He was 64 years old. The board said he had been refused permission to leave China and was a semi-prisoner of the Communists.

COUNTY INQUIRY IN 'SPEED TRAP' CHARGE BEGINS

Grand Jury Calls Moline Acres Clerk First — Marshal Calls
Complaint 'Unjust.'

An investigation of complaints by motorists about the operation of "speed traps" in some St. Louis county areas was opened yesterday by the circuit court grand jury at Clayton.

First witness called to testify was William P. Henne, clerk of the village of Moline Acres in the northern part of the county. Officials of the Automobile Club of Missouri reported last week they have received about 40 complaints from motorists who were fined there for speeding.

Henne brought for the jury's inspection a large box of papers which he said were records of the Moline Acres police court for the last year.

Automobile club officials said most of the complaining motorists contended they had been charged with going 10 miles an hour faster than they actually had been driving. Ervin H. Krone, village marshal, said he felt the club's report was "very unjust."

Previously, County Prosecuting Attorney Edward W. Garnholz said his office had received "a considerable number" of complaints about speed traps in some county areas. He said specific information about the location of speed traps would be made public later.

The grand jury continued its investigation of the County Housing Authority's operation of the housing project at Jefferson Barracks, calling as witnesses two oil and gas company executives and two members of the County Council.

The councilmen are Harold D. Carey, Republican from the sixth district, and council chairman, and Thomas C. Dunne, Democrat from the first district.

Also appearing before the jury were Charles K. Walter, head of Riverside Gas Co. of Glendale, which last July was awarded a contract by the authority to supply propane gas for heating and cooking in some project apartments, and William Litzinger, manager of Deem Oil Co. of East St. Louis, a wholesale distributor. The Deem firm is headed by Walter Deem, a member of the authority.

Later today the jury called County Supervisor Luman F. Matthews, County Counselor Herbert C. Funke, County Planning Director M. Eugene Baughman and John J. McAttee, housing authority counsel. The four officials were understood to have been invited to give testimony relating to the housing authority inquiry.

In 1954, however, Berne brought a habeas corpus proceeding before Circuit Judge Sam C. Blair here and showed that the St. Louis circuit court order included the word "sentence" rather than "sentences" with reference to his conviction here. Blair held then that the St. Louis time should start when the first, the four-year sentence, was completed.

Meanwhile the St. Louis circuit court order in the case was changed to make clear the intention that Berne should first serve both Cole county terms.

Berne first was sentenced in Cole county circuit court. The terms were four years for burglary and three years for larceny, to run consecutively.

Meanwhile, he faced seven burglary charges in St. Louis. He was taken from prison to St. Louis, and there pleaded guilty and was given concurrent sentences totaling seven years. It was intended that he should not begin serving those seven years until he had finished the two Cole county sentences.

Aldermen Vote $58,000 To Prepare for Plaza Park

Money to Cover Costs of Preliminary Work on Area Within 15th, 18th, Market and Chestnut.

The Board of Aldermen, in its final meeting of the current session, today appropriated $58,000 from municipal revenue for projects that will prepare the way for constructing a three-block city park from Fifteenth to Eighteenth street between Market and Chestnut streets.

While the appropriation was not made from the $1,500,000 in bond funds voted for the park, the expenditures will be credited toward the city's share of the "write-down" loss on an adjoining five and one-half blocks which are soon to be sold to private developers for middle-income apartments.

Projects Included.
Projects authorized in the appropriation include:
Widening Chestnut street by four feet between Fifteenth and Eighteenth streets and laying new sidewalks along Chestnut from Sixteenth to Eighteenth.

Removing the roadway of Sixteenth between Market and Chestnut.

Removing a triangular strip of roadway at Seventeenth and Market streets for eventual realignment of Seventeenth to eliminate an existing jog at Market.

Replacing traffic signals in the area.

Sale of Block Approved.
In another of the 46 bills passed at the session, the board authorized the sale of a city block bounded by Hickory and Rutger streets, South Theresa and Carr Lane avenues for $100,000 to agents acquiring the property for a truck terminal.

The city acquired the property many years ago for playground purposes at a cost of $19,000. During the wartime housing shortage, it was used for temporary housing in the form of Quonset huts. When a playground was established at the new L'Ouverture School, 3021 Hickory, the block was no longer needed for this purpose and was put up for sale.

Among the bills on which the board took no action were measures to prohibit racial discrimination in restaurants, hotels and other public places; to repeal the cigarette tax; to repeal authority to put fluorides in the city's drinking water; to prohibit use by public officials of tape-recorders without consent, and to establish major truck routes throughout the city.

Some of the other bills that died with the session would have prohibited the keeping of bees within the city limits; limited the number of tavern licenses to the number presently existing; regulated the hours of sale of gasoline; and revised city regulations for packing houses and meat-processing firms.

A total of 63 measures that had been introduced during the session died.

New Traffic Signals.
The board enacted ordinances providing for the installation of new traffic signals at Kings-highway and West Florissant avenue; Robin avenue and West Florissant; Shreve avenue and West Florissant; Union boulevard and West Florissant; Carondelet boulevard and Des Peres drive; Compton and Park avenues and Compton and Lafayette avenues.

Bills directing the installation of stop signs at the following intersections were also passed: Murdock and Wherry avenues; Commonwealth and Piccadilly avenues; Carter and Warne avenues; Childress and West Park avenues; Farrar and Twenty-fifth streets; Third and Gratiot streets; Park Lane and Emma avenue; Jefferson avenue and Biddle street; Louisiana avenue and Pestalozzi street, and McRee and Thurman avenues.

Angle Parking Approved.
Angle parking during church services was authorized at the following places and times: Skinker boulevard, from Aberdeen place to Fauguier drive, Saturdays and Sundays, 6 a.m. to 1 p.m.; Page avenue, from Taylor avenue to Walton avenue, Sundays, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.; Leona avenue, from Bowen street to Federer place, Sundays, 6 a.m. to 1 p.m.; north side of Lafayette avenue from Mississippi avenue to Jefferson avenue, from 6 a.m. to 1 p.m. Sundays, and on south side of Jefferson from Missouri avenue to Jefferson, during the same hours.

The board directed the removal of a stop sign on Natural Bridge avenue at Siemers lane.

Salaries of the three members of the Permanent Condominium Commission were increased from $6,000 to $7,500 in another ordinance passed. The commission is a standing body named by the circuit court to handle condemnation proceedings.

The board reconsidered its vote last week in favor of a contract with Hospital Co-IV Inc. permitting installation of coin-operated TV sets in City and Homer Phillips Hospital, and then defeated the measure.

Alderman Raymond Leisure explained the bill was faulty in that it named the contracting party before bids had been taken.

The next session of the board will begin April 17 when the budget will be considered.

Truck Driver Acquitted in Fatal Crash with Auto

Clifford E. Hale, a Berger (Tex.) truck driver, was acquitted of a charge of manslaughter at Clayton yesterday when Circuit Judge Douglas L. C. Jones sustained a motion for a directed verdict of acquittal after completion of prosecution testimony.

Hale was arrested after his tractor trailer struck an automobile Jan. 6, 1955, at Lindbergh boulevard and Ladue road. The driver of the car, Walter Brown, a construction worker who lived at 8 Dade Bridge court, Ferguson, was killed, and three members of his family were injured.

Hale was quoted by the highway patrol at the time as saying an electric signal changed to redly just as he drove into the intersection and that he did not have time to stop.

The judge decided the evidence was not sufficient to show culpable negligence.

LANGER'S LIQUOR LICENSE REVOKED

Club Prevue Operator's Reputation Cited—Gambling Equipment Found.

The liquor license issued to Jack Langer for Club Prevue, Madison county night club and gambling casino, was revoked today by the Illinois Liquor Control Commission, at Springfield.

The commission acted on a complaint by three Granite City ministers. In announcing its action today, the commission said the license had been issued improperly to Langer "since he is not a person of good character in his community."

A commission spokesman also cited the finding of gambling equipment at the club. The reference apparently was to results of a raid last Nov. 1 in which state police smashed the Corona Room, and chopped up dice and roulette tables. Gambling had been reported in the club from time to time.

The club was closed over last weekend, state police reported. Political observers pointed to the approaching Illinois primary, April 10, as a possible reason, since gambling is a major issue in the primary. Another suggestion for the closing was that the county grand jury was in session at Edwardsville.

While the night club proper was wide open, the casino, of which Frank (Buster) Wortman, gang boss, was reported to be operator, could be entered only by persons who had been carefully screened.

JURY PROTESTS
U.S. FAILURE TO

considered dilatory tactics by the Justice Department in the inquiry.

The Government has taken the position that continuation of the inquiry along some lines might jeopardize its attempt to go through with the trial, scheduled to begin May 7, of Matthew J. Connelly, former appointments secretary to President Truman; Theron Lamar Caudle, former head of the Justice Department's tax division; and Harry I. Schwimmer, an attorney. They are charged with conspiracy to defraud the Government.

When the jury came into court and Judge Moore was summoned from his chambers to read the report, Max H. Goldschein, an Assistant Attorney General detailed here recently to supervise the investigation, said: "We feel that we should be allowed to read the report before it is made public."

Judge Moore said he felt that the report should be made public so long as it did not contain any material that should be considered within the secrecy of the grand jury.

Although Goldschein said again he would like to read the report first, Judge Moore ignored the request and read it in full in open court.

"This has been a very long drawn-out investigation," Judge Moore observed after the jury presented its report. "The grand jury does not know just what is expected of it. I gave my original instructions about five years ago. There has been little result."

"I am making no criticism, but I know I must share the same feeling of frustration that this grand jury has," the court remarked.

After reading the report Goldschein told the court, "When I came into the case there were a number of matters pending, and I was not familiar with all the jury had gone into." He added he came here after working with grand juries in Washington and New York.

"How much more we could have done, and how much more direct approach to the charge that your honor gave could have been taken, I do not know," Goldschein said.

"The last 30 days have been strenuous. The investigation was direct and detailed. We omitted nothing. The foreman and other members of the jury have commented on the exhaustiveness of the examination of the witnesses."

Goldschein, who announced that he would "study the report and see what can be done," explained that he had informed the jury when he took charge that there would be a recess in March. He added it was "humanly impossible to go on without a break," and that he requested a recess "to permit me to recuperate."

Newcomb in Charge Earlier. Until indictments of Caudle, Connelly and Schwimmer were voted, the grand jury's investigation was under the direction of Wyllis Newcomb, special assistant to the Attorney General. Goldschein took over recently, replacing Newcomb, who has been busy preparing for the trial.

Newcomb is expected to appear before the grand jury tomorrow in an effort to answer its complaint about progress of the investigation. As disclosed by the Post-Dispatch in January, the jury named 10 of its 23 members as a committee to see what could be done about the situation.

The jurors felt the inquiry was being used as a "political football" by the Republican-controlled Justice Department to help the G.O.P. win the November presidential election.

A Justice Department spokesman declined to comment on the report, pointing out that it had not been received as yet in Washington.

Testimony on May Co. Claim. The grand jury met again today and heard an intelligence agent of the Internal Revenue Service testify about a tax refund claim of the May Co., department store chain, the Post-Dispatch learned. The claim, for taxes paid in 1942 through 1947, was denied by the Government in 1949 on grounds the company failed to follow the statute provisions in presenting the claim.

Testimony by the agent, from Cleveland, O., involved telephone conversations between three officials of the Truman Administration, it was learned. The officials were the late Postmaster General Robert E. Hannegan, former Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder and Charles Oliphant, an official of the Justice Department.

Fred Z. Salomon, board chairman of the Famous-Barr Co. and vice president of the May Co., had originally been scheduled to be a witness today in another matter involving the company. He was served with a subpoena at St. Petersburg, Fla., where he is vacationing. Judge Moore excused the 83-year-old executive from appearing at this time.

Salomon was approached in 1950 by two men who suggested he hire William M. Boyle Jr., then Democratic national chairman, as attorney in the company's tax claim of $10,000,000 against the Government. In return the May Company was to pay a fee of $1,000,000. The May Company flatly rejected the proposal.

Text of Report.

The text of the jury's report: "An interim report of our work is being presented to the court at this time because we desire the court's advice and counsel on a proposed change in the direction of the grand jury's activities in the tax scandal investigation in the relatively short time which remains to us."

"This grand jury has given a great deal of thought, effort and time over the 116 days on which we have met in trying to carry out the charge given us of continuing the rigid investigation of all phases of the administration of the tax laws and to other internal revenue matters. We have used several channels in exploring the field of this charge."

"We mention several channels, as that fact forms the basis of our present indecision as to the most logical and profitable direction to follow in the last few weeks that we have at our disposal."

"Present plans for the jury are to recess at the end of Thursday in the present week and reconvene at the close of the pending trial which grew out of indictments returned by this body in connection with the tax scandal investigation."

Followed Charge. "During the latter part of the year 1955 the emphasis and main force of our investigation was directed toward discovery of obstruction of justice in the handling of tax matters by people in high government positions. This was directly in line with your charge to us and seemed to be the spirit of the charge as we understood it."

"In the year 1956 the emphasis shifted, seeming to be directed more clearly towards an interpretation of the latter part of the charge—that is, 'investigation heretofore directed and never concluded.' This phase was not necessarily in regard to the same subject matter."

Whether this shift in emphasis was due to policy decisions of the Justice Department, individual beliefs of attendant personnel, or for any other reason, is not known to us. We do feel, however, that this change was not in accord with our wishes or in the best interests of the completion of our duties."

Dual Approach. "We will shortly stand recessed for a period of time. This recess, we are told, is in the best interests of defendants and the Government in the forthcoming trial as well as for other reasons. It is our belief that in the time remaining of our term the best interests of justice and the substance and spirit of the court's original charge can best be served by a dual approach to the problem."

"First, an extension and completion of our prior trend of investigation should be made with the planning and direction of those members of the Justice Department who were involved in that phase."

"Second, if there is developed by the large staff presently employed some definite and concrete line of investigation, which in the opinion of the Justice Department 'will be worthy of presentation to the jury, that will, of course, be handled at such time as it is made available to us."

"But most of all we want the court to know that we feel the tax scandal investigation should be actively continued at the present time to cover as much ground as feasible before expiration of our term of office."

"Moreover, we want to see the evidence already partially developed of an apparent definite conspiracy to obstruct justice fully and promptly explored."

"It is our conviction, as previously set out, that for this purpose the original investigative staff with whom we worked so closely during the latter part of 1955 could be most helpful and we hope they can be made available soon enough to make really effective use of the time which remains to this jury."

"We, therefore, petition the court to advise the grand jury as to how we can best actively continue this investigation in accordance with your honor's original charge."

believes they are about to be dispersed to prevent collection.

It was indicated the tax liens were filed as a way of compelling a court determination of whether the Communist party should be subject to taxation.

In New York, shortly after agents seized and padlocked Communist party headquarters, Moysey said the party had never filed an income tax return but should have done so whether or not it owed any taxes, and that the Daily Worker had underpaid its taxes.

The seizures yesterday immediately raised this question: Why should the Communist party be subject to taxation if the two major political parties are not?

Section 501 of the Internal Revenue Code lists various types of organizations, principally charitable, philanthropic or educational, which are tax exempt. Political parties are not included in the list.

Sections 11A and 11B of the 1950 Internal Security Act state that an organization shall not be tax-exempt if it has registered under the act or is subject to a final order requiring it to register.

The Communist party has not yet been forced to register and is not now subject to a final order, since the Supreme Court has not yet acted on its appeal. Explaining the distinction drawn between the Communist party and the two major political parties, Revenue Service officials said income of political parties which goes for party expenses and not individual benefits is tax-exempt, but income from profit-making activities is subject to taxation.

For many years, the Communists have conducted parties, dances, lectures and other activities as fund-raising devices.

The Revenue Service officials pointed out that the Republicans and Democrats file sworn statements of their income and expenses with the House of Representatives. They said the Communists did not.

Moysey was understood to have told Commissioner Harrington that he could go into the offices of the state Democratic and Republican organizations, if he wished, and he would find their books and records in good order.

He reportedly said he tried to do the same thing with the Communist party and its officers refused to let him see any records, saying they kept none.

Moysey said the party never filed any income tax returns. Nor did it ever file application for a declaration that it was tax-exempt, he added. Such an application would have been subject to an Internal Revenue hearing.

Moysey said he negotiated with attorneys for the party to file application for a tax-exempt declaration, but they did not do so.

Spokesmen for the Democratic and Republican national committees said the parties had never filed income tax returns, working on the assumption that they are voluntary associations, not corporations.

A Republican party official said the G.O.P. did not file tax returns because it was not a profit-making organization. He added that the party did pay a personal property tax in the District of Columbia.

"Reached Here and There." In determining the amount of the tax deficiencies allegedly owed by the Communist party, the Internal Revenue Service "reached here and there and got whatever they could" in the way of assets, a Revenue Service spokesman said.

"We made it as high as we could" so as to attach all visible assets of the party, he added.

Moysey, who was appointed to his present position last month, is a career government employee. He was first employed by the Revenue Service in 1941 as an agent.

DAILY WORKER

STILL PUBLISHING

NEW YORK, March 28 (AP)—The Daily Worker, voice of United States Communism, will go on publishing despite Government seizure of the newspaper's editorial and business offices on back-tax claims, its editors declared today.

In raids yesterday, Internal Revenue agents padlocked the newspaper and Communist party offices in five cities. The Government said the party owed $389,265 in income taxes for 1951 and 1952 and 1953.

The party took the position that it was tax exempt. The Worker said in an editorial that Treasury agents knew six months ago that the paper had a $200,000 annual deficit, but had threatened to force the paper to pay income taxes unless it disclosed names of contributors and lenders.

While Communist party assets were the main target of the raids, the Government also got hold of Daily Worker subscription lists, and files and documents in the party offices. Though its editorial offices were locked, the Worker was able to print about 14,000 copies of its Wednesday morning edition because the paper's typesetting and press work are handled by a private firm.

The Worker, which has not failed to publish in 32 years, made emergency arrangements to handle its editorial work in the offices of a Yiddish language newspaper in the same building.

The Daily Worker's attorney, Harry Sacher, said Internal Revenue officials had assured him that no effort would be made to interfere with actual publication of the paper.

The Government crackdown also affected the Worker's regional office in Chicago, and party headquarters here and in Philadelphia, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Communist centers in Newark, N.J., and Detroit also were listed for seizure if their assets had any resale value. They were not raided.

Eugene Dennis, general secretary of the United States

Communist party, sent a telegram to President Eisenhower asserting the raids were a "lawless attempt to muzzle political opponents by police force."

The Government skipped the usual procedure of presenting a bill for back taxes and trying to collect. Instead, it slapped liens on Communist properties and seized the party's assets.

To carry out the swift maneuver the Government invoked a so-called "jeopardy" assessment clause. This is used when there is thought to be some chance of the debtor disposing of his assets before the Government can seize them.

The Daily Worker started publication in Chicago Jan. 13, 1924, and two years later moved to New York.

Annual operating deficits in the almost adless paper have ranged from $50,000 to $200,000.

The eight-page tabloid once had a circulation of about 35,000 but that has dwindled to about 9,000 copies daily and about 25,000 copies of its big-ger weekend edition.

PRAVDA TAKES DENUNCIATION OF STALIN TO PUBLIC

lective leader of the party, guarding and interpreting its principles, is the central committee.

"Giving Stalin all the credit due him, soberly evaluating the big role he played in the revolution and the establishment of socialism, the Communist party at the same time decided to liquidate the cult of the individual so as to re-establish Lenin's principles and norms of life in government work and to establish the best conditions for the construction of Communism," Pravda said.

The party organ made it clear that the campaign to cut down Stalin had just begun.

"To eliminate the vestiges and survivals of the cult of the individual from our life," Pravda said, "it is necessary to develop a large-scale explanatory campaign."

The newspaper said Marx and Lenin had "nipped in the bud attempts at their personal exaltation, no matter who made those attempts."

In contrast, Pravda said, Stalin encouraged them. "Wool Over People's Eyes." "Under this cult of the individual there developed such ugly phenomena as the white-washing of shortcomings, the varnishing of reality and the pulling of wool over people's eyes."

"Dogmatism is a direct result of the cult of the individual... The development of theory and the expression of anything original or new could be made by only one man—Stalin."

"All others were required to popularize the ideas he expressed and to formalize them. All this retarded the development of Marxist-Leninist theory."

Pravda charged that Soviet historical and military films "are filled primarily with exaggerations of Stalin's role."

"War movies and art and literature even to this day do not show the proper role of the Communist party and the Soviet Government," the newspaper said.

Pravda said that worship of Stalin opened the way for "such inveterate agents of imperialism as Beria and his accomplices to worm their way to leading positions of the party and Government."

L. P. Beria, head of Russia's secret police, was denounced as a traitor and executed after Stalin's death. Pravda said Beria's execution made it possible "to restore the standards and principles of Socialist law."

Need for Leaders. The newspaper cautioned that the Soviet Union still needs leaders. It said: "The rich experience of Socialist construction teaches us that the principles of collective leadership and the broad development of Socialist democracy do not at all deny the role and responsibility of the individual leader for matters entrusted to him."

It said the masses must have the right to elect and replace their leaders.

"This, however, does not mean in the least," Pravda added, "that the process of collective labor could be left without definite leadership, without precisely determining the responsibility of leaders, without strict order created by the unity of the will of the leaders."

Nagy Challenges Communists to Liberate Satellites.

WASHINGTON, March 28 (UP)—Former Premier Ferenc Nagy of Hungary has challenged the Communists to prove the sincerity of their attacks on Stalin by liberating the eastern European satellites.

Nagy said yesterday in a letter to Communist Party Boss Nikita S. Khrushchev that the denunciation of Stalin could bring a new era of peace, understanding and prosperity.

But he said the Russians will "only serve mankind truly" if they begin the "liquidation of Stalin's tactics" and return the right of self-determination to satellite peoples.

"You cannot diminish terror at home, and keep up terror on the international scene," he wrote.

Nagy said he mailed the letter to Soviet Ambassador Georgi Zarubin here, asking that it be transmitted to the Kremlin.

10,800 PUPILS GET OFF EARLY DUE TO TORNADO WARNING

About 10,800 pupils in Granite City and Madison public schools were sent home early yesterday because of a Weather Bureau warning of conditions favorable for a tornado in that area.

Schools were alerted by George Welkin, Madison county school superintendent. In the Madison system, 2800 pupils were released an hour before the end of the school day. A total of 8000 Granite City pupils were released 10 minutes early.

The Weather Bureau said the warning was based upon an unusually deep low pressure area in northwest Missouri. Instead of proceeding down "tornado alley" on the East Side, the pressure shifted northward, bringing snow in the Dakotas, Minnesota and Wisconsin this morning, Assistant Chief Meteorologist Arthur A. Rausch said.

Two Webster Groves Boy Scouts received plaques last night in recognition of their quick action in snuffing out the burning pant leg of a younger boy, and giving him first aid at the scene of the accident.

Don Czarneski Jr., 13 years old, of 203 Baker avenue, Webster Groves, and John Gerstner, 14, of 522 Olive court, Webster Groves, were honored in a ceremony at the church hall of Seven Founders Catholic Church, 6741 Rock Hill road, Affton.

The plaques were presented by Cub Pack, Scout Troop, and Explorers' Post No. 165, all sponsored by the church. The youngsters rescued by the two scouts, David Proffer, 11, of 10018 North Marlene drive, Affton, is a former member of the cub scout pack.

Don Czarneski said he and young Gerstner were on a merit badge hike last December when they found Proffer and a group of younger children playing by a bonfire in a field. As they chatted with the group, the pants of the Proffer boy caught fire. He started to run, Czarneski said, but the two scouts stopped him, smothered the fire with an old coat and gave first aid. They then escorted him most of the way to his home.

LICENSE FORGOTTEN, RINGS LOST ON THEIR WEDDING DAY

SAN FRANCISCO, March 28 (AP)—The wedding day of Italian actress Marisa Pavan and French actor Jean Pierre Aumont was trying.

The bride lost her diamond engagement ring just before taking off this morning for a Hawaiian honeymoon. The diamond and another family heirloom ring Aumont had given her were lost in the powder room of San Francisco International airport, the bride told police.

Pan American's midnight flight for Honolulu was delayed an hour while police organized a search but failed to find the ring. The distressed couple departed on the plane with police assurance investigation would continue.

The actor and actress were married yesterday morning in Santa Barbara, but first a clerk had to bustle back to the license bureau office where they had forgotten the marriage license.

JET BURNS, PLANE HITS IT; TWO FLYERS SAFE, ONE DEAD

PERRY, N.Y., March 28 (AP)—A jet plane exploded last night and a training plane crashed into it as it burned. The pilot of the F-86 jet was killed. The two flyers in the T-33 training plane bailed out safe. All were Air Force men of the Fifteenth Fighter Group at Niagara Falls Air Base, about 40 air miles west of Perry.

Lt. Charles Shortle, 27 years old, a veteran of the Korean war and holder of the Distinguished Flying Cross, piloted the jet plane. His home is near Niagara Falls.

Second Lt. John Murfee, 23, of Buffalo, and First Lt. Eric Von Schweinitz, 26, of Niagara Falls, were taken to a hospital for treatment of burns.

Both planes were on an interception exercise. One survivor was quoted as saying the trainer was following the jet when the jet exploded. The flyer said the occupants of the trainer could see they were about to fly into the jet wreckage and ejected themselves.

ST. LOUIS MAN SURPRISED

St. Louis, Mo., March 28 (V-P)—In another of Vincel Pontiacs sky high trades, a St. Louis man expressed surprise and delight with the amount offered on his '53 Ford. He said, "Vincel's offer was $167.50 more than any of the others. You, too, can make a real deal at Vincel Pontiac, 3295 S. Kings-highway."

contracts in the Southwest, and an attempt to impose marketing criteria in the Missouri river basin which would have destroyed power reserves of REA co-ops in that area.

Lobbyist Rewrites Rules.

The report centers its fire, however, on the action of Under Secretary Davis in August 1954 in initiating suggestions from Herman Kruse, a registered lobbyist for the Pacific Gas and Electric Co. of California, for changes in long-standing Interior Department regulations governing electric power line rights-of-way across Government-owned lands.

Davis, then solicitor for the department, received 13 suggested changes from the lobbyist and 10 of these were adopted verbatim by the Interior Department along with two others in which there were only slight changes in language, the report says. Lobby-suggested regulations were issued over the signature of Acting Secretary of the Interior Ralph Tudor, another Eisenhower appointee, who since has resigned.

The committee finds that the most important change in the regulations, one which followed the lobbyist's recommendation verbatim, was the elimination of the rule requiring private power companies seeking to build transmission lines across Government property to agree, in return, to utilize unused capacity of their lines to transmit federally-generated power to federal installations, rural electric co-ops and statutory preference customers.

Effect of Action.

The effect of dropping the reciprocity requirement was to confront the Government with the choice of building duplicate transmission lines to serve preference customers or leave them without the full supply of power to which they were entitled.

The report charges that in executing the new regulation the department "gives away valuable rights the Government otherwise would have had" and "will make it more costly for rural electric co-operatives and public agencies to secure the power to which they are entitled by law."

The committee recommends that Congress re-establish the requirement for transmission agreements with private companies utilizing public lands for their transmission line. The committee also would require that the Interior Department give 30 days' advance notice of any changes in regulations affecting federally owned or controlled natural resources, except in emergencies.

In connection with the committee's demand that McKay, Andahl and Davis obey the law or resign, the report says that "these officials have repeatedly attacked as socialistic the program established by Congress to preserve for the people the benefits of their God-given resources."

"By repeated failures to request appropriations and by other acts and omissions, they have attempted to turn these resources over to private monopoly for profit-making purposes," the report contends.

FIRE ROUTS SEVEN FAMILIES, WOMAN OVERCOME BY SMOKE

A two-alarm fire at 2922 Lucas avenue routed seven families from a three-story brick building this afternoon, causing extensive damage to first and second floors before it was brought under control. A woman resident was overcome by smoke.

Mrs. Lelia Jones, a Negro, was overcome by fumes in her third-floor apartment. Firemen took her to safety and she was sent to Homer G. Phillips Hospital. She was treated and released.

The building is owned by Mr. and Mrs. Moses Carey, Negroes, who live on the first floor. Neighbors helped carry Carey, an invalid, to safety. Fire Chief Hugh P. Lyons estimated damage at $3000 to the building and $1000 to contents. Cause was not determined.

BOAT BLOWN AGAINST ALTON LOCK WALL, TWO MEN SAFE

An outboard motorboat being used by Ralph Wideman, 71 years old, of 3316 Wismer road, Oveland, and his son, George, 42, of 2921 Ridgeway avenue, St. John, was swamped by waves in high wind on Alton lake today, but the boat was blown against a lock wall of the Alton dam and they climbed to safety.

Lock employees towed the craft inside a lock and it was saved.

The Widemanns had launched the boat, a new one, at Harbor Point, across the river from Alton. Waves drowned the motor, and for a time the tiring craft drifted dangerously toward the dam.

SAVES 3 SONS FROM FIRE IN SHED, ONE DIES LATER

BOULDER, Colo., March 28—Mrs. John R. Wilson, formerly of St. Louis, smashed the door of a burning shed yesterday and pulled out her three young sons.

Robert Wilson, 10 years old, died today at Community Hospital. His brothers, James, 7, and Mickey, 5, suffered lesser burns. The mother was burned on the hands.

Police said the boys apparently locked themselves in the frame shed when playing with matches. Straw and wood in the building became ignited, and the frightened boys were unable to open the door. Mrs. Wilson heard their screams and broke the door with an ax.

'Deliverance Day of Prayer' Today in Behalf of Negroes

Whites Urged to Take Part in Demonstration Stemming From Montgomery Bus Boycott.

NEW YORK, March 28 (AP)—Today is "national deliverance day of prayer"—a demonstration stemming from the bus boycott by Negroes in Montgomery, Ala.

Sponsors of the movement have urged whites as well as Negroes to offer prayers.

The leader, Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr., New York Negro congressman as well as a Democratic Congressman, said the prayers would be "for the deliverance of all who suffer from persecution and... for the salvation of all who are afflicted with racial prejudice."

Among cities listed for major observances were New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, Washington, Columbus, O., Cleveland, Philadelphia and Galveston, Tex. Southern clergymen indicated they expected only token or unorganized services in the South.

At Montgomery, Negro churches keep their doors open all day so that anyone could offer prayers at his convenience. There were no special prayer meetings scheduled. Many of the Montgomery Negro ministers who were indicted by a grand jury for violating a state anti-boycott law were out of the city in connection with prayer observances elsewhere.

"It is impossible to estimate how many will take part," the Rev. Mr. Powell said on the eve of the demonstration. "This is a movement, not an organization," he explained.

A New York City rally was set for today in Manhattan Center, with Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish participation.

Some cities had been forced to postpone central rallies because meeting places were not available for today, the Rev. Mr. Powell said.

A rally in the Chicago Coliseum is set for April 11. The United Packinghouse Workers said its members in Chicago would pause on their jobs for five minutes today to join in prayer in "protest against segregation."

Among phases of the demonstration listed were: a vote by the Massachusetts Legislature to halt work at noon to pray, and a gubernatorial proclamation in California designating today as a day of prayer.

The Rev. Mr. Powell said

Interdenominational. Negro from Montgomery attend Sponsors arranged to have a meetings in the major cities.

CHICAGOAN ARRESTED AS COMMUNIST CHIEF

Emanuel Blum Called Former New England Leader
—Assails FBI Haste.

CHICAGO, March 28 (AP)—Emanuel Blum, who the FBI said headed various Communist party groups in New England and elsewhere was arrested on a south side street yesterday. He later complained of what he called the FBI's "undue haste" in arresting him before a United States commissioner.

"They brought me down in an FBI car so fast that we hit a taxi. They didn't even stop to exchange credentials," he declared. The FBI denied its car was involved in an accident.

Blum offered no resistance and admitted his identity when he was seized. A federal warrant for his arrest had been issued Friday in Indianapolis.

The warrant accused him of violating a clause in the Smith act making it a criminal offense to belong to the Communist party while knowing its aim is to promote the overthrow of the United States Government through force and violence.

The FBI said Blum formerly was chairman of the Communist party in New England, president of the Massachusetts branch and executive secretary of the New York state Communist party. Blum also had been a party organizer for Indiana before coming to Chicago in 1951, the FBI said.

He was held in lieu of $20,000 bond pending removal to Indianapolis after United States Commissioner C. S. Bentley Pike continued the hearing to April 4.

Blum was born in New York City, where he later taught in the public school system. He was described as an extensive traveler who often posed as a toy salesman, author or lecturer.

TURN YOUR BACK TO RAIN,
EISENHOWER'S DOCTOR SAYS

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., March 28 (UP)—President Eisenhower's physician says it's better to turn your back to a driving rain.

"Wet and cold wind in the face is brought into the lungs much more quickly than a wind from the back," Maj. Gen. Howard McC. Snyder said yesterday. "Even for a person who has never heard of a coronary, I would not advise walking head-on into a blowing rain." Snyder had said Monday that he did not mind the President playing golf in the rain as long as it was blowing on his back. Yesterday he gave the above explanation.

WOMAN REPORTS SHE WAS CRIMINALLY ASSAULTED

An employee of a building in the 3800 block of Washington boulevard reported she was criminally attacked early today by a young man who entered an office in which she was working and threatened her with a knife.

Following the attack the man, a Negro about 20 years old, took the victim's purse, containing $19, and fled. The woman is 43 years old.

"MY CAR WAS WORTH MORE THAN I THOUGHT"

St. Louis, Mo., March 28 (V-P)—"Because of the high trade I got at Vincel Pontiac on my '54 Chevrolet, my payments will be much less than I figured they'd be," says a local resident. "I'm glad I traded now instead of waiting and I think you can make a good deal now, too, at Vincel Pontiac, 3295 S. Kingshighway."

YOUTHS INDICTED FOR MURDER IN AFFTON HOLDUP

Richard Bevans, 16, to Be Tried as Adult — Howard Johnson, 17, Also Named.

An indictment charging Richard G. Bevans, 16 years old, and Howard E. Johnson, 17, with murder in the fatal shooting last Jan. 23 of an Affton sandwich shop proprietor was returned yesterday by the St. Louis county circuit court grand jury.

The indictment was voted after Judge Noah Weinstein, judge of the juvenile division of the circuit court, issued an order directing that Bevans stand trial as an adult instead of as a juvenile.

Judge Weinstein ordered the dismissal of an information charging the youth with delinquency by reason of murder and said he must be prosecuted under the criminal laws as an adult.

Referring to an investigation made by the county probation officer, Judge Weinstein said it appeared that Bevans "is not a proper subject to be dealt with under the reformatory provisions" of state law.

County police have said Bevans, of the 6400 block of Hoffman avenue, has admitted firing six shots at Arthur L. Seise when he thought Seise was going to resist a robbery attempt at the shop, Gravois and Laclede Station roads.

Johnson, of the 2600 block of Lyle avenue, Maplewood, previously was charged with murder in a warrant. Police said he was Bevans's companion in the robbery attempt. Johnson's age, 17, is the legal dividing line between juveniles and adults under state criminal statutes.

A judge can rule, however, that a juvenile must stand trial as an adult if he finds the crime to be of a sufficiently serious nature.

Bevans has been held since his arrest Jan. 28 at the Children's building, on the grounds of County Hospital. Johnson has been held without bond in the county jail.

$50,000 IN U.S. TAX LIENS FILED AGAINST MOVIE STARS

LOS ANGELES, March 28 (AP)—The collector of internal revenue has filed income tax liens of more than $50,000 against a group of movie people. The largest lien for taxes for 1952-53 was against actor's agent Sid Luft and his wife, July Garland, $20,891.09. Other liens included: Ethel Barrymore, 1951 and 1954, $12,142.80; Rita Hayworth, 1951, $7,541.41; Mickey Rooney and his wife, Elaine, 1954, $3,295.03 and $3,709.23, respectively, and Carmen Castillo Cugat, one of Bandleader Xavier Cugat's ex-wives, 1953, $4,377.81.

LAST IN ITALIAN GANG OF KILLERS PAROLED

St. Louis-Born Amerigo Dumini Drove Car in Matteotti Murder.

ROME, March 28 (AP)—The last survivor of the Fascist gang that killed Socialist Deputy Giacomo Matteotti in a notorious political assassination of 1924 is being paroled from prison.

He is Amerigo Dumini, St. Louis-born Italian who drove the killers' car. He got a five-year "whitewash" sentence from a Fascist court in 1926, but a post-war court in 1947 gave him and two other men 30 years for premeditated homicide.

Matteotti was one of the most outspoken foes of Benito Mussolini before the Fascist debacle of 1943.

Dumini Born Here: Son of Italian Portrait Painter.

Dumini was born in St. Louis in 1894 in the 2800 block of Franklin avenue. His mother was English and his father was an Italian, Adolphe Dumini, a portrait painter, who had come to St. Louis in 1892. He returned to Italy in 1898.

Amerigo Dumini remained behind retreating Italian troops in Derna, Italy, in February 1941, to be captured by the English, saying he preferred prison to living under the Fascist flag. During Dumini's first short and pleasant prison sentence in the Matteotti case—he served only three months—his family received $2000 a month at Mussolini's order. Four months after his release he was arrested for speaking of Mussolini as "pig," but he later recanted and was let off with a 14-month sentence.

J. J. EAGAN FILES IN COUNTY FOR PUBLIC ADMINISTRATOR

James J. Eagan, an attorney of Woodson Terrace, today filed at the St. Louis County Board of Election Commissioners for the Democratic nomination for Public Administrator in the county.

An active member of the Airport Township Democratic Club, Eagan's candidacy was endorsed by Robert Young, Democratic committeeman of Airport township.

Eagan is president of the St.

TRUMANS TO SPEND WEEK IN SORRENTO ON THEIR TRIP

SORRENTO, Italy, March 28 (AP)—Former President Harry S. Truman and Mrs. Truman plan to spend a week in this town overlooking the Bay of Naples.

Dr. Josef Klaus, provincial governor at Salzburg, Austria, announced yesterday that the Trumans were expected to visit there in May also.

The size of an apartment the Trumans have reserved here for a week suggested that they might be accompanied by their then honeymooning daughter Margaret and her husband, Clifton Daniel.

(In New York, Daniel said he had no plans to visit either Sorrento or Salzburg.)

The reservations, said Manager Angelo Foddal of the Europa Palace Hotel here, were made in Truman's name. The Trumans are expected here on May 21 and will remain until May 26 or 27.

MOVING TOWARD START ON COUNTY BOND ISSUE JOBS

Matthews Seeking Funds for Clayton Road Widening, Two Bridge Projects.

Immediate preparation of ordinances to appropriate funds for the first three public improvement projects under the St. Louis county bond issue approved last year, was to be recommended to the County Council today by County Supervisor Luman F. Matthews.

Matthews said it was hoped that bids on the three jobs—widening of part of Clayton road and two bridge projects—could be taken in time for actual construction to begin next month.

The three projects scheduled for first action are the widening of Clayton to a width of 40 feet between Conway road and Lindbergh boulevard in Ladue, at a cost estimated at $160,800; replacement of a bridge carrying Ashby road over the old Creve Coeur streetcar right-of-way, at a cost of $20,000; and construction of a new bridge taking Old Baumgartner road over Matis creek in the south part of the county, to cost $18,000.

Earlier, the council at a special meeting passed a resolution directing the sale of $10,725,000 in bonds to a syndicate of six banking and investment firms.

Sale of the bonds, almost entirely from the 1955 issue, will permit a start to be made on a long list of projects approved by the Citizens' Public Works Advisory (watchdog) Committee for work during 1956 and 1957. The investment firm group, which includes G. H. Walker and Co. and Scherck, Richter and Co., Inc., of St. Louis, submitted the low bid for the bonds. The bid calls for a net interest cost to the county, over a 20-year period, of $2,836,133.

Five bids, in all, were received by the council. The council also accepted a low bid of $1942 for printing the bonds, submitted by Northern Bank Note Co. of Chicago.

E. ST. LOUIS CREWS BEGIN SURVEY FOR EXPRESSWAY

Survey crews have begun work on the route of a proposed expressway leading from the east approach of Veterans Memorial Bridge in East St. Louis to a point north of the city where the traffic artery will connect with U.S. Highways 40, 50, 66 and 67.

Funds for East St. Louis's share of the expressway cost came from the recent sale of $15,500,000 in refunding and improvement bonds for the bridge. Some $10,100,000 of the amount was to be used to retire outstanding revenue bonds, and the remainder was to help finance construction of the eastern approach project.

Mayor Alvin G. Fields of East St. Louis recently announced that purchase of property along the right-of-way would start in the near future. The expressway has been described as a major highway need on the Illinois side of the Mississippi river.

TENTATIVE HOUSE OK ON PENAL BILL FOR $15,000,000

Measure With $10,000,000 for Medium Security Prison Wins in Voice Vote.

By EDWARD H. THORNTON
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 28.—A bill providing $15,000,000 for improvements in the state penal system, including $10,000,000 for a new medium security prison, was tentatively approved by the House today.

As originally introduced as an Administration-approved measure, the bill would have provided $20,500,000 for the penal system, but the House Appropriations Committee cut the amount to a flat $15,000,000.

The committee's recommendation was adopted today by a vote of 99 to 17 before the House, after more than three hours of debate, tentatively approved the bill by a voice vote. The bill will now go on the calendar for final passage.

Postponement Move Fails.
Representative Joseph Beckler (Dem.), St. Louis, sought to postpone consideration of the measure until all appropriations allocating bond issue funds had been reported out by the House committee. He unsuccessfully appealed Speaker Roy Hamlin's ruling that he was out of order.

Before voting on the bill, the House defeated Republican attempts to eliminate the $10,000,000 for the new medium security prison, by a vote of 92 to 32.

Gov. Phil M. Donnelly has said the bill allocating funds for improvements was essential to the state's penal system.

Representative Loyd J. Estep (Rep.), Christian county, made an attempt to have the total bond issue funds for the prison system limited to $7,500,000.

An attempt by Representative Thomas D. Graham (Dem.), Jefferson City, to increase the prison's appropriation to $18,000,000 was defeated.

Representative Carl T. Weber (Rep.), Franklin county, argued against the medium security prison appropriation, saying "we never have any trouble getting people into prison, but we have long waiting lists at our hospitals and colleges."

Representative A. Clifford Jones (Rep.), Clayton, said the figures recommended by the Appropriations Committee "are guesswork, but so are the figures submitted by the penal authorities."

Committee Studies Bills.
Meanwhile, the Appropriations Committee was to consider bills for $20,034,000 for state-supported eleemosynary institutions and $33,592,700 for state colleges and universities. It is expected the committee will make drastic changes in both measures, although they were contained in recommendations in the Administration's budget.

Many of the committee members who toured the various institutions eligible to participate in funds from the $75,000,000 bond issue for expansion and rehabilitation purposes have expressed disagreement with the recommended allocations.

Representative Joseph W. Martino (Dem.), St. Louis, at the conclusion of the three-week tour last Thursday, asserted there was "no doubt that the mental hospitals' needs are the most critical."

Bill Reported to House.
The committee reported to the House, with a recommendation for passage, a bill which would appropriate a total of $2,201,000 from general revenue and other state funds for various departments and agencies of the state government for necessary operational expenses and supply funds which the Legislature neglected to appropriate during the regular session last year.

The measure, passed out of committee by a vote of 31 to 2 with two members not voting, would allocate $700,000 to pay the cost of the two special state elections held in the last six months.

One of these was the referendum election last Oct. 4 at which the state cigarette tax and the school foundation program were approved by the voters. The other was the state bond issue election Jan. 24.

A total of $300,000 would be appropriated for the state penitentiary and Alcoa intermediate reformatory for operating expenses.

Money for Salary Boost.
Also included in the bill, a catch-all measure, is an appropriation of $14,032 to pay the salary of the director of corrections, James D. Carter. The salary of the director was increased from $7,500 to $15,000 a year at the last session, but funds to pay the increase were not appropriated.

Other appropriations which would be provided in the bill include: $109,545 to establish a branch office of the division of workmen's compensation at Joplin and employ three additional referees; $100,600 to defray the cost of enforcement of the state cigarette tax and $22,000 to repay the Department of Revenue for funds already expended for this purpose; $235,000 to pay the state's share of increased salaries of court reporters, and $255,000 to pay the cost of the current special legislative session.

At St. Louis State Training School, a former city institution for the mentally deficient, at 10695 Bellefontaine road, St. Louis county, Dr. Arthur A. Hines, medical superintendent, outlined the more pressing needs to the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Dr. Hines cited recommendations made last year by the Missouri Inspection Bureau, dealing largely with fire hazards at the school. The bureau, representing fire underwriters, suggested that custodial patients be moved from the third floor to a new one-story building, to be erected. Other construction recommended included a recreation and auditorium building, combination garage and maintenance shops and a storage building.

The presence of maintenance, carpenter and paint shops in the basement of the present building increases the fire hazards, especially in a building that has no fire escapes, it was pointed out. Dr. Hines told the Senate committee the estimated cost of the recommended facilities is $2,500,000.

GAINS IN BRAZIL REPORTED IN IMPROVING COFFEE CROP

Brazil, largest producer of coffee, is making progress in efforts to improve its crop, the St. Louis Coffee Club was told yesterday by John F. McKiernan of New York, president of the National Coffee Association.

He spoke at Hotel Chase concerning a recent trip to the South American country. McKiernan said Brazilian growers were experimenting with new types of trees that are said to be more resistant to disease, frost and drought damage. He said that he had emphasized, in talks with Brazil's leaders, the importance of the United States as a consumer of coffee.

Coffee is used in 96 per cent of all homes in this country. McKiernan said. Roy B. Ruyle, vice president of Star Coffee Co., is president of the St. Louis Coffee Club.

HIGHEST OCTANE GASOLINE IN TOWN

At SITE and MARS Stations

How? Here's how: there is no finer... or higher octane... gasoline in St. Louis than Cresyl 110. We can PROVE it too... by independent laboratory reports. But... even though Cresyl 110 is "top quality"... we sell it for less to bring more people into our stations. This gives us the profit we need and it gives YOU liberal savings. FAST U.N. ACTION ON MIDEAST WAR THREAT IS URGED Lodge Calls on Security Council to End Debate Tuesday on Hammarskjöld Trip.

By ALVIN H. GOLDSTEIN
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y., March 28—Debate in the United Nations Security Council on the United States proposal to send U.N. Secretary General Dag Hammarskjöld to the Middle East to find means of preventing all-out war between Israel and its Arab neighbors, was to be resumed this afternoon.

Hope for prompt adoption of the resolution, calling for a report from Hammarskjöld within a month after beginning this mediation with the hostile factions, was abandoned Monday when four Arab members of the U.N. and Israel exercised their rights to participate in the deliberations.

Thus, representatives of Egypt, Jordan, Lebanon and Syria, on one side, and of Israel on the other, were seated at the table, each evidently prepared to comment on the American resolution instructing Hammarskjöld to survey the situation and submit recommendations for action to the Security Council.

It had been the hope of western delegations that the resolution would be speedily adopted by unanimous vote as the Soviet Union in preliminary conferences indicated Moscow would not oppose it unless it was objectionable to Arab states.

Arab Opposition.
Later it became apparent the Arabs intended to delay the vote or perhaps prevent passage of the measure if possible. Any Security Council majority decision could be nullified by an adverse Soviet vote, constituting a veto.

Despite the discouraging outlook, United States Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge Jr. fervently urged members of the 11-nation council and the five "parties to the dispute" to conclude debate Tuesday when it was expected the council would reconvene. Neither Jewish nor Arab states are represented this year on the council.

Iran, occupying the seat reserved for Middle East regional representation, initiated the request or delay backed by Yugoslavia and the Soviet Union, the Iranian spokesman sought to prevent council president Sir Pierson Dixon of Britain from scheduling the session today, urging postponement until after Easter.

Western delegations, including those of France, Britain, Belgium and Australia, stood staunchly behind Lodge, who insisted the resolution was a prelude to "a matter of urgent concern" and delegates ready to speak today should be heard. Lodge seemed confident the resolution ultimately would be adopted.

Mission Complicated.
If Hammarskjöld is dispatched to the Holy Land, his mission is complicated by the fact that some Arab governments decline to recognize the existence of the Jewish nation as a sovereign state, therefore making mediation or negotiation as between equals extremely difficult.

Also, and what is most alarming to the western world, particularly to the United States, is the build-up of armaments on both sides in the Middle East, accepted as a prelude to inevitable war if it continues. Russia, through satellites, has been supplying Arabs with arms and military instruction.

President Eisenhower has voiced his alarm at the signs of developing war in the Middle East. His concern motivated the resolution introduced by Lodge calling for U.N. intervention on the ground that "the present alarming situation" and the "need to arrest the present grave trend" has certainly never been more serious than it is at this moment.

Hammarskjöld declared after a recent tour of the Middle East he saw no imminent danger of war. He thought it was "mature" to conclude that Arabs and Jews were engaged in an arms race. He suggested it was the function of the U.N. to continue in the role of mediator and peace observer, an assignment which would become his personal responsibility by terms of the United States resolution.

It directs him to seek withdrawal of hostile forces from borders established by the U.N. Armistice Commission; freedom of movement for neutral observers in those areas and in demilitarized zones, and establishment of "local arrangements" for the prevention of violence and exposure of truce violations.

DEACONESS HOSPITAL LISTS 8 PROJECTS FOR FORD GRANT

Directors of Deaconess Hospital listed eight projects to be started at the hospital when the Ford Foundation grant of $153,500 is received, it was announced today. Foundation officials had requested such a list in a recent questionnaire.

A spokesman for the hospital pointed out the estimated cost of the eight projects, "which we have wanted to get started for a number of years," is $173,700, or $20,200 more than the foundation grant.

They include $60,000 for a new nursery floor; $55,000 for X-ray department; $25,000 for laundry equipment; $16,000 for special beds; $10,000 for new sterilizers; $8,000 for surgical room lights; $10,000 for anesthetic equipment and $700 for heart station equipment.

Upper Colorado Project Wins Final Approval in Congress

Compromise Bill for $760,000,000 Water and Power Development Sent to President.

WASHINGTON, March 28 (AP)—Congress today gave its final approval to a bill authorizing the $760,000,000 Upper Colorado river water and power project.

The Senate accepted a compromise measure approving the huge development two hours after the House had passed the bill without debate.

The authorization bill now goes to President Eisenhower, who repeatedly has endorsed the proposed development.

The Senate interrupted another bill to approve the Upper Colorado compromise.

Senator Clinton Anderson (Dem.), New Mexico, obtained consent for the action and Democrats and Republicans from the upper basin states heaped praise on one another for co-operation in obtaining passage of the legislation after years of dispute.

Senator Joseph O'Mahoney (Dem.), Wyoming, said the project would be of "inestimable value" to the upper basin states and would "stop wastage of this vital flow of water."

Senator Eugene Millikin (Rep.), Colorado, who has been active in behalf of the bill, was taken to the floor in a wheelchair.

Anderson praised Senator Thomas H. Kuchel (Rep.), California, for his fight against the project but his fairness in not using obstructive tactics.

Kuchel told the Senate he had opposed parts of the legislation as "inimical to the interests" of California.

KILLED IN TRAINER CRASH

FOLEY, Ala., March 28 (AP)—A Naval cadet from Illinois was killed yesterday when his trainer plane crashed at nearby Barin field.

He was John L. Calbas, 21 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Calbas of Clarendon Hills, Ill. The Navy said Calbas was approaching the field for a landing when his single-engine plane stalled and crashed.

SOVIETS PROPOSE AN ALL-EUROPEAN ECONOMIC PACT

GENEVA, March 28 — The Russians have proposed "an all-European agreement on economic co-operation" to be prepared under the guidance of the United Nations economic Commission for Europe.

This and two other additions to the agenda were sent in by Moscow last night to the Secretariat, after the agenda had already been printed and only nine days before the commission holds its annual meeting.

The other items are "the elaboration with ECE of planned measures for the development of business contacts between countries of Eastern and Western Europe," and the establishment of ECE organs on questions concerning the peaceful uses of atomic energy.

The idea of an "all-European" agreement on economic co-operation is not entirely new. It was proposed by the United States when the Marshall plan was launched in 1947 and bluntly rejected by Moscow.

Out of it grew the Organization for European Economic Co-operation in Paris, a strictly Western body.

United Fund Moves in County. Headquarters for United Fund in St. Louis county has been moved to 228 North Meramec avenue, Clayton, it was announced today. Offices formerly were at 12 North Hanley road, Clayton.

SOVIET SUBMARINE BUILDING STEPPED UP

Gruenther Says Reds Produced More in 1955 Than All Other Nations.

PARIS, March 28 (AP)—Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther, Allied commander in Europe, said today Russia built more submarines in 1955 than all of the rest of the world.

He told correspondents accredited to his headquarters he could see no reason for reducing defensive measures, despite Russia's current drive for relaxation of tensions.

Russia is building more planes, more airfields and more submarines year by year, he said.

"I can explain in terms of the cold war why they have 175 divisions in Russia, 20,000 planes and 60 divisions in the satellites," he said. "But I can't explain 400 submarines. There is no cold war value to a submarine. It is a hot war weapon," Gruenther said.

"They have five times more submarines than Germany had in 1939."

CINCINNATI DOCTOR TO GIVE TRITT MEMORIAL LECTURE

Dr. Leon Schiff, professor of clinical medicine at the University of Cincinnati, will deliver the Jack H. Tritt Memorial Lecture tomorrow at 8:30 p.m. at Jewish Hospital's Moses Shoenberg Memorial, 306 South Kingshighway.

The lecture is the ninth in a series established in memory of Dr. Tritt, who died in 1947 while in service as a resident at the hospital. Dr. Schiff, director of the gastric laboratory at Cincinnati General Hospital, received his medical education at the University of Cincinnati.

deterioration in the fleets of the smaller powers in N.A.T.O. is causing serious concern.

He conceded there had been a considerable strain in the NATO organization during the past year. He did not state the points of strain but said they were the ones everyone knew about, including the difficulty between Britain and Greece over Cyprus.

By the United Press. Gruenther said the West still can win any war with the Soviet Union.

He said the basic problem of the West is air defense against surprise attack from behind the Iron Curtain. He noted that the Russians have jet fighters and bombers that can operate from grass runways, while the Western fighters cannot. This would give the Red forces an advantage in any sneak, surprise attack.

BOTTLES THROWN FROM EISENHOWER RAIL CAR SOUGHT

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W.Va., March 28 (UP)—Workmen searched along the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad tracks today for some ginger ale bottles tossed from a private car later used by President Eisenhower.

The C. & O. said three persons had suffered gastric upsets after drinking ginger ale aboard the swank private railroad car three days before it took the President to the North American "summit" conference.

C. & O. spokesman Howard Skidmore said some of the bottles were thrown from the car by employees somewhere between Huntington, W.Va., and Washington.

He said tests on seven other ginger ale bottles taken from the private car refrigerator disclosed "no foreign matter."

Both the Secret Service and the railroad were investigating the incident. Neither investigation immediately turned up anything indicating other than accidental causes were involved.

EGYPTIAN AND ISRAELI TROOPS EXCHANGE FIRE

JERUSALEM, Israeli Sector, March 28 (UP)— Egyptian troops opened rifle and automatic weapons fire today on an Israeli patrol inside Israel in the Nitzana (El Auja) area, an army spokesman announced. The Israelis returned the fire, he said.

The Associated Press quoted the Egyptians as saying that the Israelis fired first and that the shooting lasted three hours. Neither side reported any casualties.

The commanders of the Israel and Jordan areas of Jerusalem met at the Mandelbaum gate today to confer about incidents resulting from the sporadic shooting by members of the Arab Legion and the Jordan National Guard from the walls of the Old City.

WOMAN IS ATTACKED AT HOME, MAN ARRESTED. A 44-year-old married woman was criminally attacked early today at her home in south St. Louis.

The woman told police she was walking through the rear yard when a young man appeared and held a knife to her back. Following the attack the man, a Negro, fled through the alley, she reported.

A man arrested in the neighborhood a short time later was booked suspected of rape after he told conflicting stories. Officers said the man is under bond in a criminal assault alleged to have been committed last November.

13 KILLED AND 10 INJURED IN TRAIN WRECK IN SWEDEN

STOCKHOLM, March 28 (AP)—Thirteen persons were killed today in a train wreck in northern Sweden, police reported. Ten were injured seriously.

A freight train collided head-on with a railway diesel car between Arvidsjaur and Mosköle, about 700 miles north of Stockholm. The diesel was crowded with workmen and with some tourists. The collision buckled the passenger vehicle and hurled occupants onto the snow-covered fields.

U.N. Supervisor Strives in Vain For Peace as Arabs and Israeli Base Moves on Military Strategy

If Hammarskjold Goes to Middle East He Will Face Same Frustration Burdening Gen. Burns—Both Sides Complain About Acts Both Commit.

By RICHARD DUDMAN

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JERUSALEM, March 28.

IF UNITED NATIONS Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold makes an on-the-spot investigation of the Palestine crisis, he will receive a report of deep frustration from the head of the U.N. truce supervision organization.

Canadian Maj. Gen. E. L. M. Burns, the truce supervisor, himself sometimes uses the word "frustrating" in private conversations to describe his assignment, although he carefully confines public statements to specific situations.

Two of his four mixed armistice commissions are hopelessly deadlocked, rifle and machine-gun fire across the troubled borders is an almost daily occurrence and both sides have illegally massed troops at their frontiers. A big backlog of unobserved U.N. resolutions might help matters, he believes, but the big powers for their own reasons are not willing to apply sanctions to force compliance.

This is the situation that will greet Hammarskjold if the United States proposal for a special study by the Secretary General is adopted by the Security Council.

The Canadian U.N. chief of staff sees a fundamental difficulty. Both sides base their actions on high military and political strategy instead of co-operating on specific measures to reduce border tension.

For example, at El Auja (Nizana), on the Sinai peninsula, he believes both Israel and Egypt have more armed strength massed at the border than the 1949 Armistice between them permits. Israel has complained to the Security Council that Egypt illegally has brought tanks and an excessive number of troops to that point. And yet Israel has military forces on its own side of the border in a zone that was demilitarized by the armistice.

Military strategy governs here. Both sides realize that El Auja has been a border crossing point for invading armies for centuries—the only inland point where there is a road that can take a sizable military force across the desert frontier.

An Israeli Foreign Office official told the Post-Dispatch today that any Egyptian invasion would have to come through the El Auja. He added, "We would have to go through the same gateway if we decided to launch a counter-blow against Alexandria."

To ease tension on that border, Burns has recommended that the border be marked clearly and that both sides move their forces back one kilometer (five-eighths of a mile). Even half a kilometer would do, he said. The Security Council backed up the proposals.

But Egypt will not agree to marking the border, since that would imply some degree of recognition of the State of Israel, which Egyptian leaders have promised to wipe off the face of the earth. And Israel will not move back an inch, on the ground that this would mean relinquishing sovereignty over a strip of its territory.

Only the Jordan and Lebanon mixed armistice commissions are operating now. Those countries lie along Israel's quietest borders. The Egyptian and Syrian commissions intended to supervise the most explosive borders, are deadlocked and meet no more.

Meetings Boycotting. The deadlock of the Israeli-Syrian commission is particularly irritating to Gen. Burns. Israel will participate in no regular meetings as long as Syria insists on bringing up its complaints about Israel's violating the terms of a small demilitarized zone established in the territory. Burns takes the position that the commission does have jurisdiction over such complaints and that, in any event, the commission is essential.

Warnings of Russian Power Rise Meet With Yawns in U.S.

Nation Indifferent to Danger Created by Official Policy of Letting Reds Out-strip America in the Air.

By STEWART ALSOP

WASHINGTON.

SOME VERY SENSATIONAL statements have recently been made by the highest Air Force authorities, but hardly anybody has paid any attention to them at all. Consider the following brief sampling:

Gen. Nathan Twining, Air Force Chief of Staff: "The Soviets have long since passed us in quantity and they are making remarkable strides in quality."

Gen. Thomas D. White, Deputy Chief of Staff: "They have been and are out-producing us in all categories but medium bombers. . . . Here is the area of deep concern—the Soviets are presently beating us at our own game—production. . . . The Communists are making scientific and technological advances at a faster rate than we are."

Lt. Gen. Thomas S. Power, chief of the Air Research and Development Command: "With both quantitative and qualitative superiority on their side, we would lose the protection of the deterrent force and be at their mercy. This danger is very real and immediate."

What all three generals are saying, of course, is that the Soviet Union is rapidly outstripping the United States in strategic air power, the one field in which this country has heretofore enjoyed superiority. Surely it is no exaggeration to describe such warnings as sensational. Surely an official warning of "a very real and immediate danger" that this country will be at the mercy of the Soviets, for example, is nothing if not sensational.

Yet such warnings are met these days with a long, bored, national yawn. Why?

The question is worth asking, because the national indifference to such warnings is a vitally important phenomenon. There appear to be a number of interlocking answers.

In the first place, there is a tendency to regard all generals as professional cryers of "Wolf, wolf."

Progress Underestimated. Certainly the services have sometimes been guilty of budget-minded scare-mongering. Yet, as Gen. Twining pointed out in his testimony, the Air Force has consistently underestimated Soviet progress in air power, and by a very wide margin, rather than the other way around.

Then there is the theory that "they don't really know—they're just guessing." The theory is comfortable, but incorrect. When Twining testified recently that the Soviets were producing more than twice as many long range bombers as this country, and that they were already testing intermediate range missiles, he was not

Eisenhower Sets New Path In Diplomacy

North American Parley Demonstrates Personal Approach to Talks.

By JAMES RESTON

The New York Times News Service.

(Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON, March 28. THE United States-Canadian-Mexican conference at White Sulphur Springs was important, not because it was likely to decide anything, but because it apparently set a new pattern of personal diplomacy.

The conference was an Eisenhower idea, based on the President's personal preference for talking things out rather than negotiating things out, and it will be followed by other such meetings held away from Washington in an atmosphere of genial informality.

Other American Presidents have tried similar experiments. Theodore Roosevelt, Woodrow Wilson, Franklin D. Roosevelt, and Harry S. Truman all ventured into the field of personal negotiation. Some of them thought it was a success, others were disillusioned by their experience, but, on the whole, the historians have not been very kind to the great conferences held at Versailles, Casablanca, Tehran, Yalta, Potsdam and Geneva.

Different Approach. Mr. Eisenhower's approach, however, is different from the others. He is thinking, not so much of personal intervention in large conferences such as last July's meeting in Geneva, but of small man-to-man conferences which can be held without large staffs, without any formal agenda, and stripped of the usual protocol of such international meetings.

Prime Minister Nehru of India will be here in July, and though nothing can yet be said about it, another such meeting is now under discussion with an equally illustrious world figure.

What is developing, in short, is a conscious effort to place the famous Eisenhower personality on the scales of world diplomacy. The theory is that anybody who spends a couple of days with the President is bound to come away convinced of his good intentions and more eager to dissolve whatever differences may exist between the United States and the country whose representative is sitting across the table.

Indian Leader in Close Contact With Chou — Impressed by Eisenhower's Words at Geneva.

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS

A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

(Copyright, 1956, The Post-Dispatch Co.)

WASHINGTON, March 28.

WHILE THE ANNOUNCEMENT received comparatively little notice, the visit to Washington next July of India's Prime Minister Nehru can have far-reaching consequences for American policy in Asia.

Nehru had a great deal to do with initiating the current talks between Communist China and the United States. Those talks, between United States ambassador U. Alexis Johnson and Red China's ambassador Wang Ping-nan in Switzerland, have come close to a stalemate. The Peiping propaganda radio has been sputtering threats to break them off, with the implication that military action against Formosa might follow, unless the United States showed greater willingness to negotiate the terms Red China considers vital.

The announcement that Nehru is to meet with President Eisenhower will, in the belief of observers here, cause Red China's foreign minister, Chou En-lai, to suspend any drastic action. Intelligence reports from the China mainland opposite Formosa fail to show signs of preparation for action against the island stronghold of Chiang Kai-shek and his Nationalists. At least twice in recent years reports of invasion barges being massed have touched off an alarm of imminent danger.

Admired Eisenhower. Nehru and Chou maintain close personal contact. They are in frequent direct communication on many aspects of policy in Asia. Shortly after President Eisenhower's heart attack Chou sent a long message to Nehru expressing his concern that the President had apparently been eliminated from the world scene.

Chou said that he had come to believe after the summit conference at Geneva that Mr. Eisenhower was "a man of peace" and it was doubtful whether those taking over from him would pursue the same policy of peace.

Nehru had likewise been deeply impressed by Mr. Eisenhower's words at the Geneva meeting. Immediately following the summit conference the President and the Indian Prime Minister exchanged a series of letters with Mr. Eisenhower urging Nehru to visit Washington and the latter seeking to persuade the American President that he would get a warm welcome from the Indian people if he visited India.

When Secretary of State John Foster Dulles visited New Delhi on his recent tour of Southeast Asia he personally renewed on behalf of the President the invitation to come to America. Nehru agreed and this must be recorded as one of the beneficial results of the Dulles tour which has come in for considerable criticism. On the whole Nehru and Dulles got on well, despite their wide divergence of views in recent years, during the New Delhi talks.

Reuther in India. Signs of improvement in the Indian-United States relationship are evident. Walter Reuther, vice president of the newly merged AFL-CIO is visiting the Indian national trades union congress as a good will representative from this country. In a brief visit he will also talk with Nehru and other government leaders.

There is a hope that Chief Justice Earl Warren may pay a friendly and informal visit to India next summer. Nehru is expected when he comes to Washington to urge the Chief Justice to fly out in August.

But for all these hopeful portents the basic differences remain. On the day the announcement was made of his talks with President Eisenhower in July the Indian Prime Minister repeated his denunciation of the Southeast Asia and Baghdad pacts. Nehru's criticism was directed at the fact that the Southeast Asia treaty powers in their latest meeting in Pakistan had spoken of the need to settle the dispute over Kashmir through a United Nations plebiscite. India has resisted the idea of a plebiscite in the disputed territory.

Differences Remain. Similarly with respect to Red China the fundamental differences remain. Peiping still holds 13 of the 19 Americans whom they said last September they would release. The United States refuses to consider a meeting at the foreign minister level and the latter seeking to

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

How to Avoid the Draft

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

The situation described in this space March 23 by your Farmington reader, "Unhappy Parent," is correct and by no means unique to this particular family. The I-A draft status of many of our youth inhibits their finding employment which is suitable and permanent.

Their position is by no means hopeless, however. A young man's position relative to an unfavorable draft status may be greatly ameliorated by a visit to his nearest United States Army Reserve Recruiting Office. Here he may receive information on this popular and valuable Army Reserve program.

The young man aged 17-18½ may enlist for eight years in an Army Reserve unit of his own choice and in his own home town. Within 120 days after enlistment he will enter upon an active duty training period of six months.

While it is true that the G.I. Bill has been discontinued, many splendid educational opportunities are open to the young man enlisting in this program. There are scores of Army schools available to those who qualify, schools which will fit the young man to earn a substantial living in civilian life.

Upon completion of his six months' active duty training the reservist returns to his home and completes the remainder of his enlistment in the reserve unit in which he enlisted. This enlistment carries with it a complete draft deferment. In short, the man who enlists may feel free to approach any employer, secure in the knowledge that he may tell this employer that his draft status is such that he may receive extensive training with no fear of further extended service.

This program, with one major difference, is also open to high school students. The young man who enlists while in high school may be deferred from his six months' active duty for a period of 120 days following graduation after which the program will be the same as above.

In Farmington "Unhappy Parent" may receive further information on this and other reserve programs from Capt. Jack L. Thomas, 116 N. Henry street. Here in St. Louis, information is available at 5009 Kennerly avenue, 4330 South Kingshighway, Twelfth Floor, Mart Building, Twelfth and Spruce streets, or by calling MAin 1-6426, Extension 395. CAPT. EDGAR MCGOWAN, Training Officer, Missouri Army Reserve Advisor Group.

Speaking of Darwin

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

This is in regard to Reader Florence Moog's prattle in this column recently about her kinship with the apes.

I would rather believe in what is written in Genesis as any God fearing man will do, rather than the theory and conjecture put out by "Darwinism" whereby they throw us all into a simian-evolved family as this Moog excerpt bespeaks: "To deny our cousinship with the apes is as little reasonable as denying that the earth revolves around the sun." If I please Miss Moog, let her speak for herself. If she feels she evolved from an ape she is entitled to her opinion.

GEORGE F. BRUNKHORST, Festus.

One Who Will Stick

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Well, there's one voter, I know, who will enthusiastically adopt and live up to the new G.O.P. slogan, "Stick With Ike." He is our Vice President. G. B. GAININE, St. James, Mo.

Another Month of Daylight

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

In your editorial of March 22, entitled "For That Extra Month," you advocated the extension of daylight saving time through October.

I too am in favor of an extra month, but I believe it would make more sense and please more people to look in the other direction and include the month of April.

The longest day of the year is June 21. Daylight saving already extends more than three months after June 21, but it starts less than two months before June 21. Wouldn't it make more sense to start three months before June 21, and make use of the longer days in April?

The extra time would be far more useful to more people in April than in October. For the gardener April is the month when more work is done than any other. He is then full of hope and enthusiasm, and wishes that there were more time, especially more spare time after working hours.

By October his interest in such activities has ended, and he is ready for the cold weather sports.

For other people what can compare with a stroll around the block, renewing acquaintance with the neighbors, or just sitting in the freshly painted lawn chairs on a balmy spring evening in April? Surely not the chilly, smoke filled air of October.

R. W. YOST.

The Whole Essay

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

John Crosby's column on the "Death of a Humorist," was a gem. It was on Fred Allen.

I was glad that evidently you ran Crosby's piece in its entirety. Some papers I saw had penciled parts of this tribute extraordinary. Every word was necessary for this Crosby portrait, and I am glad your editors felt that way too.

WALT PARTYMILLER, York Pa.

The Stevenson Situation

From our Washington bureau Marquis W. Childs has now written his second article concerning opposition to Adlai E. Stevenson within the Democratic party.

The gist of what Mr. Childs has reported is this:

Democratic party chieftains from farm and mountain states met in Denver early this month to plan presidential campaign strategy. They agreed that the Democratic nominee should offer a strong appeal to the farmers. Because former Gov. Stevenson had taken a moderate position on farm legislation they came to the conclusion that it would be necessary to find a new standard bearer for 1956.

These leaders now interpret the Minnesota primary as proving them right. Senator Kefauver, so they say, outran Mr. Stevenson because the Tennessee took a more advanced position on agricultural price supports and the farmers of Minnesota rallied to his stand.

This is first of all a matter within the Democratic party. Whom the Democrats nominate for President is primarily their own concern. They will be judged in November in terms of how their nominee rates by comparison with the Republican nominee.

But when a major party nominates for the presidency it takes a step that is also of concern to the entire country. For potentially that nominee, whoever he may be, is a prospective President. Thus the Minnesota primary and the deductions from it are matters of widespread public interest.

The former Illinois Governor developed a large and devoted following in a short few weeks in 1952 because he was something new and fresh in contemporary American politics. He pledged himself to "talk sense to the American people." Moreover he kept that pledge. He refused to promise more than he believed he could deliver. And he did not talk one way in one part of the country and another way in another part.

Indeed in the 1952 campaign Mr. Stevenson made it very clear in New Orleans that he believed that racial discrimination must pass from education, employment and other important aspects of democratic life. And he let it be known in Texas how he felt about having three or four states gobble up the vast offshore oil wealth of the nation.

Adlai Stevenson would be wholly out of character if he went about the country promising farmers the moon in an effort to be nominated. Were he to do so, he probably would lose as many votes as he would make. Millions of people are for Mr. Stevenson because he knows that there are no easy, pat solutions, because he invites them to serious, hard study of the issues, because he himself is the kind of man who will work thoughtfully and diligently on our problems within the framework of our institutions.

Can it really be true that these very qualities of sincerity and integrity which commended Mr. Stevenson after his nomination in 1952 should now handicap him in the 1956 race? If so something has happened to the sense of values of his party.

No one can be sure of how to weigh the factors in the Minnesota primary. If thousands of Republicans voted for Senator Kefauver to rebuke Democratic Gov. Freeman and Senator Humphrey—and the number who did so apparently was large—the vote was not only not a vote on Mr. Stevenson's views and policies. It was not even a wholly measurable Democratic vote.

Certainly it would be an irony if a special situation in Minnesota started a political snowball that rolled up in Florida and California where other Stevenson-Kefauver tests are yet to come.

It would be an irony and it could cause the Democratic party to offer less than its best-qualified men as its 1956 nominees. Our times call for the qualities of statesmanship. Folkiness and handshaking have their place but alone they are no substitute and never will be.

Gov. Donnelly Holds High Trump

Gov. Donnelly and his Department of Corrections have lost the first round of their fight to prevent any substantial cut in the bond issue appropriations they recommended for prison improvements. And while this is disappointing, it is not so bad as it seems at first glance.

True, the House Appropriations Committee cut the Governor's $20,508,000 request to $15,000,000—or more than 20 per cent. But the measure still must stand the scrutiny of the whole House and then find its way through the various legislative stages of the Senate. If Gov. Donnelly lets it be known that he means business the bill ought to be in substantially the shape he desires when it arrives for his signature.

This is because the Governor holds just about the highest trump in the game. He can veto all or part of any appropriation that gets past both houses. As a practical matter this means that legislators with substantial interest in particular projects will have to play it the Governor's way if they want to see their own programs enacted.

The Big Price-Fix

If a committee of Congressmen and Senators sat down in Washington just before Easter to fix wage rates for the year, and another committee met to decide on the price of shoes and two-pants suits, not everybody would be complacent. It is generally recognized that a congressional conference committee, composed of Republicans and Democrats meeting under the pressures of an election year, is not the best instrument for fixing prices of goods or wages of labor.

Just such a committee, however, is attempting to fix the price of major farm products this week. As was to be expected, the committee's decisions so far appear to be mostly on the upward side of the price scale. Price supports at 90 per cent of parity have been restored for at least one year, and this probably means 45 cents a bushel more for wheat, 24 cents more for corn, 3 cents a pound more for cotton—a billion dollars, all told, for the growers of these and other supported crops.

If the farm bill were vetoed by President Eisenhower, as it may be, the beneficiaries of the conference committee's actions would see that billion dollars snatched from their hands. A stroke of the presidential pen would cut the price of wheat back by 45 cents, corn by 24 cents and cotton by 3 cents.

Is this the right way, on either side, to manage farm prices and to support farm incomes? The answer is obvious.

We are not suggesting that farm prices should be delivered over entirely to the tender mercies of supply and demand. That has been tried and found wanting. Farmers do need the kind of income protection which labor gets by organization and business gets by bigness. It is in the broad public interest for government to help stabilize the farm economy. But there are better ways of doing that than by section-year bargains to fix the price of major crops. It is the task of constructive statesmanship to develop those ways and carry them into action.

Guide for Guided Missiles

After more than two years of criticism on his conduct of the nation's vital guided missiles program, Secretary of Defense Wilson has appointed Eger V. Murphree, president of the Esso Research and Engineering Co., to the newly created post of co-ordinator for the program. Secretary Wilson is giving Mr. Murphree "whatever authority is necessary to get the job done."

The task is an enormous one requiring the utmost in tact, initiative and professional ability. Some of Secretary Wilson's severest ordeals in the conduct of his difficult office have sprung from the missile field. Back in 1954 the Senate Appropriations Committee ordered him to explain within six months why the missile program was so "disorganized." He finally submitted a tardy report which for some undisclosed reason was stamped "secret" and pigeonholed. But from that time on the criticism over the missile program increased.

This criticism grew as the importance of missiles began to be stressed generally. President Eisenhower in his budget message last January made special mention of the fact that the expenditures for missiles would be "the highest in our history." Military men and Congressmen continued to point out that the program was not what it should be and Senators Symington of Missouri and Jackson of Washington declared that Soviet Russia was far ahead of America, particularly in long range ballistic missiles.

The climax probably came when Trevor Gardner, Assistant Secretary of the Air Force for Research and Development, resigned last Feb. 8 because of displeasure with the program. Secretary Wilson then said that he was going out and get a "doer" who could push his program for him. Mr. Murphree is now that "doer."

He has on his hands one of the most vital problems of national defense. Not only will he have to get the program straightened out but he will have to deal with an Army, Navy and Air Force which are hampered by a growing rivalry over missiles. Less than two weeks ago the Army and the Air Force topped this situation with a dispute in which the Army charged the Air Force with invading its field and duplicating its efforts in anti-aircraft defense. Such difficulties increase the task of supervising the field of 30-odd types of missiles. And in addition Mr. Murphree's duties include acting as Pentagon spokesman on missiles before the National Security Council and the President.

But encouragement may be taken from the fact that the missile situation was in somewhat similar shape in 1950 when K. T. Keller, the Chrysler executive, was appointed with full powers to straighten matters out. As one military commentator wrote three years after the appointment when Keller resigned, "In 1950 the program, scattered among Army, Navy and Air Force desires, was confused and halting. It now is fully co-ordinated and moving briskly."

It is up to Mr. Murphree to duplicate Mr. Keller's feat. He faces a bigger problem than did Mr. Keller and a more pressing one, since Soviet Russia is reported to be ahead of the United States in some aspects of the missiles field. And a Senate Armed Services subcommittee, appointed to investigate the entire missile program, will be sure to pick up any tricks that Mr. Murphree misses. May Mr. Murphree have the greatest success in his most difficult task!

Teamsters Tighten Reins on Hoffa

James R. Hoffa, the teamsters' young-man-in-a-hurry, has been jerked to a halt by the union's executive board. It has confirmed Dave Beck, the union president, in powers which Mr. Hoffa was seizing and which had induced George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO, to threaten expulsion of the teamsters from the national labor federation.

The immediate reason for this was a $400,000 loan to the International Longshoremen's Association which was negotiated by Mr. Hoffa despite the fact that the ILA was expelled from the old AFL in an effort to clean up the New York waterfront. Mr. Beck has announced that the ILA will not get the money from the teamsters, thus eliminating the chief cause of trouble with the AFL-CIO.

Beck also has been put in charge of cleaning up sore spots in the teamsters' union, and a new organizing drive. Mr. Beck himself is not regarded as the paragon of labor leaders, but he now has the opportunity of showing that the clash with Mr. Hoffa was something more important than a contest between two union power-wielders. He can work for the kind of clean unionism which always gets general approval.

Serious Middle Over TVA

Comptroller General Campbell's request for legislation clarifying TVA's fiscal powers points up the serious middle into which Congress has got itself by procrastination.

For more than two years TVA has been urging Congress to let it meet the increasing power requirements of the Tennessee Valley region.

When Congress failed to respond, and at President Eisenhower's request, TVA prepared a plan for financing its new capital outlays for power plant out of revenue bonds. That proposal has lain before Congress for the last 10 months without any conclusive action.

This month, the House passed a supplemental appropriation bill which indirectly approved the use by TVA of its revenues to build additional generating units into existing plants. Because this approval was given in the committee report and was nowhere mentioned in the bill, there was no way for the Senate to reverse or even modify it. Comptroller General Campbell's request for clarification has followed.

We believe it is unwise for TVA to construct new generating units, whether at existing plants or new projects, by the use of either revenues or bond proceeds without the express approval of Congress. The same holds true of any other decision which would ordinarily rest with Congress. The proper way to finance TVA is with appropriations. Only in that way can Congress maintain the supervision which is its responsibility.

But if TVA is to be responsible to Congress, it follows that Congress must be responsible to TVA. Responsibility is not a one-way street.

From the beginning of the Eisenhower Administration, both Congress and the Executive department have displayed little sense of their responsibility to TVA or of TVA's responsibility toward the very considerable part of our country which it is solely responsible for supplying with electric power.

The mess into which this default of responsibility has developed, and to which the Comptroller General somewhat plaintively refers, may be partly corrected by the legislation for which he asks. It can never be wholly corrected until Congress reassumes its responsibility toward TVA and, through it, toward the Tennessee Valley region.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO KHRUSHCHEV

'Containment' Is Obsolete

The Mirror of Public Opinion

Only strong political measures of affirmative character can avert a serious debacle for American policy in Asia, says Supreme Court Justice who traveled there; to counter Soviets, America must stress military less and ideals of freedom more.

From an Address at Roosevelt College, Chicago, by Justice William O. Douglas

It is almost trite to say these days that the world is in revolution. Yet the implications of that revolution are still not truly appreciated at the high levels of government and have hardly percolated to the mass of the people.

We have oversimplified the problem by thinking of it in terms of Communism and Communists. We have leveled our big guns of propaganda, public opinion, and law against Communism and the Communists. We shaped our policy in negative terms—in anti-Communist measures, in anti-Communist attitudes and with loyalty oaths. We have put on one of the greatest hunts in history, looking for the subversive. And we have implemented this attitude with a foreign policy that is largely military in conception.

I do not belittle the Communist threat to the world. I think it is much more serious even than we have imagined. Its seriousness, however, is increased by our negative response to it. I go further and maintain that with this negative approach which we have taken to date, we stand to lose the battle for the political balance in the world. Only strong political measures of an affirmative character can prevent a serious debacle.

Game of Power Politics

While we thought that Russia and Communism were safely contained, the Soviets changed their tactics. Under Stalin, the Soviets were darkly conspiratorial, not participating in the game of power politics. Today they are operating along broad political fronts on every continent, playing the ancient game of power politics with skill and suavity.

That single change in tactics has made the whole theory of containment obsolete and outdated. A smiling, friendly Russia has now appeared behind all our ramparts. She now asks for peace, offering help to subjugated and impoverished people, and tendering her friendship without military pacts or alliances to all who will collaborate.

The balance of political power in the world lies, I think, in Asia. It has the bulk of the people of the world—and the bulk of the riches as well. Asia is the center of the great revolutions that were loosened on the heels of World War II.

Four main influences in Asian psychology indicate why the Soviets have been able to grow in influence and prestige in Asia.

Asians Long for Equality

The Asians' desire to be rid of feudalism, the desire for independence, the longing for equality, the dream of power politics—these have all been made powerful rallying calls by the Communists.

First, as to feudalism. The Russians have inveighed against the landlords, the oligarchy that controls a nation, the combination of ecclesiastical and proprietary interests that own the wealth and run a country. The Russians are more clearly identified with this issue in Asia than we are, though we have done some good things in this regard.

Second, as to the independence movement in Asia. We actually have a splendid record on this issue, for we took the lead by granting the Philippines their independence at the end of World War II. But somehow or other, we never received much credit for it in Asian circles. And we opposed Indonesian independence so long that today in Jakarta we are often identified with the forces that tried to keep that nation under colonial rule.

Third, as to the equality of people. This is a firm article of the American faith; and we have done much at home and in the Philippines to exhort it. But generally speaking, that has not been reflected in our Asian policy. Our attitudes have been conditioned by our outlook. Our outlook has been primarily military. Those who refuse us military alliances become suspect. And those suspicions are telegraphed to the sensitive Asian mind as arrogance stemming from a superiority complex.

Fourth, as to socialism. Russia, the socialist state, makes great capital out of the fact that she already has the socialist regime which the other Asian nations have only in blueprint stage. Russia poses as the model—as the inspiration for the new socialist states that are emerging from feudalism.

Man Hunt Results in Timidity

We are protagonists of capitalism, not socialism. Moreover, we tend to be suspicious of socialists. We condemn socialism at home. And the man hunt we have been under these long years since World War II has made us timid. Those years have, I fear, made us wary of ideas. They have taught us that orthodoxy is the safest course. The reign of intolerance, which we have experienced, has narrowed our horizons and made us less daring and imaginative in our thinking. The result in official and public attitudes toward Asia has been near tragic.

I have mentioned mostly minuses. There are of course pluses. We have had embassies in Asia who have made us friends. We have had training programs and technical missions of talent, notably the Ford Foundation project in India and Pakistan, that have given impetus to democratic leanings and have helped the Asians master their own affairs. But by and large, American prestige in Asia has waned.

We enter the last half of the twentieth century having lost most of the advantages we once enjoyed over Soviet Russia. But we still have one that is imperishable, one that can be decisive in the battle for the minds and hearts of the uncommitted people of the world.

The Concepts of Free Men

That advantage is in the concepts of liberty, freedom, equality, and due process, which are deeply ingrained in our way of life.

These ideas of liberty mean freedom of expression, freedom of thought, freedom of conscience that have no counterpart in Russia.

These ideas of liberty leave room for political, literary, and artistic idiosyncracies which Russia does not tolerate. These ideas of liberty tolerate the unorthodox as well as the orthodox.

These ideas recognize true political equality of people of all races and creeds. These ideas reject the Marxist philosophy of a master plan to which all men must bow.

These ideas constitute the one true advantage we have over the totalitarian world. They can bring us victory if we will only make them vital forces in our domestic affairs and translate them into affirmative foreign policy.

FIRST THINGS FIRST?

From The Sacramento (Calif.) Bee.

Some Democrats would be perfectly satisfied to settle for control of Congress in the November elections. Those committee chairmanships are no minor political plums.

Pursuit Up a Long Trail

WARNORSE by John Cunningham, (Macmillan, 364 pp., $3.75)

Set in the days of the great American cattle boom, this novel of the Old West ranges in scene from San Antonio, Tex., to Warhorse, Mont. It is primarily Buford Allen's story. Tough, wily, incorrigible old Buford Allen, a cattle king who makes a million dollars and then loses it on the gaming tables of San Antonio.

Buford becomes deeply indebted to Tom Dickson, a vicious gambler who, when his victims renege on their debts, eliminates them in a most horrible manner.

In an effort to escape the sinister fate awaiting him, Buford, with his son Mike and a group of loyal cowhands, starts a huge herd of cattle up the long trail to Montana, with Dickson and his gunmen in close pursuit. The story reaches its climax at Warhorse, at the end of the trail, when Dickson and Allen meet for the showdown.

The author attempts to go below the physical surface of his novel, into the reflections, broodings, hungers—the smoldering deep down in old man Allen, who is oppressed by the eccentricities of his own nature. Cunningham presents him as a victim of circumstances which he could have controlled but did not because he believed himself strong enough to meet the world single-handed. Only in the end does he realize that no man alone has a chance.

The author's technical mastery of the characterization of Dickson is less impressive. The picture he draws is too callous; he has Dickson taking an esthetic pleasure in his killings, which he performs with a specially developed technique and an almost spiritual enjoyment of killing. The fate he meets is unbelievably melodramatic.

If the reader is looking forward to another story like the author's "The Tin Star" from which the memorable film "High Noon" was made, he will be sorely disappointed, though the story does hold the attention and is much better written than the average Western novel. ARMAND W. REEDER.

From Flipping to Topology

THROUGH THE MATHEMATICS by C. S. Ogilvy, (Oxford University Press, 42 pp., $4)

If you toss a coin 10 times, you may get exactly five heads and five tails or you may not. Many of us believe that 10 tosses are not really enough, and that there is a better chance of getting heads exactly half the time if you increase the number of tosses, according to the "law of averages." Not so at all, says Dr. Ogilvy, who is assistant professor of mathematics at Hamilton College. The more times you toss the coin the more the probability of getting exactly half heads and half tails keeps on decreasing toward zero after the second toss.

With examples like this one used to introduce the topic of probability, plus a liberal sprinkling of diagrams, Dr. Ogilvy has written an entertaining treatise for the general reader, on what mathematics is and what mathematicians do. He covers some of the elementary ideas of advanced arithmetic, geometry, algebra, calculus and topology, a curious branch of mathematics dealing with knots and other geometric shapes whose fundamental relations are not changed even by a thorough kneading of space so long as nothing is cut and no two remote points of space are joined.

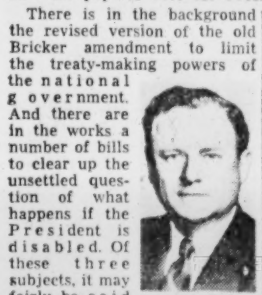

For the reader who long ago had a brief encounter with mathematics in the classroom but has scarcely thought about the subject since, this is a refreshing and stimulating book. JACK ALDRIDGE.

WALTER LIPPMANN

Invitation to Confusion

The following article was written by Walter Lippmann before the Senate voted to send all the then pending electoral reform proposals back to the Judiciary Committee. Mr. Lippmann's article in effect helps explain why this action was taken.

THERE IS AT PRESENT strong support in Congress for a variety of constitutional reforms, all of which have to do with the presidency. The Senate is voting this week on several amendments dealing with the electoral college and how the popular vote for President should be counted.

Daniel

There is in the background the revised version of the old Bricker amendment to limit the treaty-making powers of the national government. And there are in the works a number of bills to clear up the unsettled question of what happens if the President is disabled. Of these three subjects, it may fairly be said that only on the last one is it both desirable and urgent to act now. The Bricker amendment is not only not needed but might well prove extremely embarrassing to the President. As for the reform of the electoral college system, the fact is that though a theoretical case can be made for reform, there is no agreement among the reformers on what the reform should be.

Choice to Legislatures.

The leading proposal now before the Senate, the so-called Daniel-Mundt amendment, proves on its face that Congress is not ready to deal with the question. This amendment would not institute a new system of voting for President. It only sounds as if it might if one does not look at it carefully.

All that it really does is to invite each of the 48 state legislatures to do what those legislatures have now, and have always had, the right and power to do. The Daniel-Mundt amendment is not in fact what it purports to be—a new and better system of electing the President.

Only One Change.

It offers each state legislature a choice of systems. Senator Daniel of Texas, in section 2, offers each state legislature the right—which it already possesses—to order the electoral vote divided among the three leading candidates in proportion to the popular vote.

Senator Mundt of South Dakota, in section 3, offers each state legislature the right—which it has always had, and has in fact at times used—to let the electors be chosen like Senators and Representatives—two at large and the rest by congressional districts.

Senator Mundt also offers the WASHINGTON. If the state wanted to have the general ticket system for electors it would—like New Mexico and North Dakota today—have to elect its Congressmen on a general ticket.

The temptation to do just that would be strong, especially in the smaller states because with all the electoral votes counted as a unit, the state has a greater impact on the choice of President.

The best proof of this is that for more than a century all the states have voluntarily adhered to the general ticket system. The reason they have adhered to it is that this system gives them their greatest political weight.

Whatever may be said in favor of the Daniel reform, the Mundt reform or any of the other proposed reforms, nothing can be said in favor of a constitutional amendment to invite each state legislature to consider before each presidential election how it will have the popular vote in its state counted.

A Passing of the Buck.

That, however, is what the Daniel-Mundt amendment really does. It decides nothing. It merely invites and incites the majority party in each state legislature to tinker with the system in order to help shape the result of the election.

Thus the system of electing Presidents, which is now stable and uniform by general consent throughout the nation, would become varied and unsettled. A close national election could come to depend on whether a particular state legislature had for that election picked one system rather than another.

Congress is quite evidently not ready to propose a reform of the electoral system. For what is now before it in the Daniel-Mundt amendment is in fact an elaborate pretense. It covers what is simply a passing of the buck to the 48 state legislatures.

Works by two other St. Louisans—Albert Aioe and Robert Solomon—were chosen for the display, the Second Annual Drawing and Small Sculpture Show of Ball State Teachers College. The exhibition will close Saturday.

Two paintings by Herbert Cummings, artist who teaches art at Webster College and free-hand drawing at Washington University School of Architecture, are in the current twenty-sixth annual show of the Springfield (Mo.) Art Museum.

They are "White Saint," an oil that was in the City Art Museum's recent Missouri Show, and "Mute Oracle," a new egg tempera and oil painting. Also in the Springfield exhibition is an abstract sculpture by Elizabeth Phelan of Ladue. The display opened Monday and will close April 18.

Mr. Madras had owned the firm, which distributes gasoline and sells fuel oil, since 1937. Survivors include his wife, two sons, Joseph and Donald Madras, and a daughter, Mrs. Kathleen Loehner.

Funeral services will be at 10 a.m. Saturday at St. Mary Magdalen Catholic Church, 2618 Brentwood boulevard, Brentwood. Burial will be in Resurrection Cemetery.

COWDERY ART SHOW, GROUP EXHIBITS OPEN

Quinn and Jackson Win Honorable Mention in Muncie (Ind.) Display.

By HOWARD DERRICKSON

Tom Cowdery, prize-winning Kirkwood painter and also a theatrical makeup artist, today opened an exhibition of 30 new water colors devoted mostly to theatrical themes, specifically to behind-the-scenes glimpses at Municipal Opera. The display will run six weeks at Petit Pigalle, 4207 Lindell boulevard, before beginning an out-of-town gallery tour.

For the last 19 years Cowdery has done the makeup for annual gridiron dinners of the St. Louis Advertising Club and in the last two for three Missouri Athletic Club productions. A confirmed dabbler, he lectures on art at Washington University School of Fine Arts, writes advertising copy and, on occasion, does professional acting.

Like a theatrical production, his exhibition has a title—"Hardly any Bottles." This seems rather like "playing to the orchestra," however, since the title may not be comprehensible to viewers who forget that Cowdery's last one-man show was called "Bars, Bottles and Byways."

An occasional painting in the new show—such as "Table No. 2," the artist's own favorite—has a certain theatrical slickness. This quality is not unpleasing, because of his unmistakable flair and Lautrec-like draftsmanship. Colors are more subdued, generally, than in his last solo display. They take on a French subtlety that seems especially fitting in the large paintings of New Orleans.

William Quinn, winner of an anonymous donor's $100 prize in City Art Museum's last Missouri Show, and Billy M. Jackson, St. Louis artist teaching at the University of Illinois, have won honorable mentions in Muncie (Ind.) contest, it was announced today.

MRS. EISENHOWER HAS NEW OUTFIT—FOR WARM EASTER

WASHINGTON, March 28 (UP)—Mrs. Mamie Eisenhower has a new Easter bonnet and a new outfit to go with it.

Newsmen got just that much news about her Easter finery and no more yesterday in a brief encounter with Mrs. Eisenhower. They questioned her as she hurried between sessions of being photographed for the Veterans of Foreign Wars' buddy poppy campaign and the Crusade for Freedom.

Mrs. Eisenhower, voted again to the New York fashion academy's 10-best dressed list, did not elaborate on her Easter outfit.

She said only "Oh, yes, I've got a new outfit. But I don't know if it will be warm enough to wear it."

JOSEPH MADRAS, OWNER OF PETROLEUM FIRM, DIES

Joseph Madras, owner and president of the Energy Petroleum Co., 2130 Kielen avenue, Wellston, died of a heart ailment yesterday at his home, 8817 Powell avenue, Brentwood. He was 55 years old.

Mr. Madras had owned the firm, which distributes gasoline and sells fuel oil, since 1937. Survivors include his wife, two sons, Joseph and Donald Madras, and a daughter, Mrs. Kathleen Loehner.

Funeral Services for Bill Cane to Be Held In East on Saturday

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., March 28 (AP)—Harness racing today mourned William Henry (Bill) Cane, head of the Yonkers, N.Y., raceway and promoter of the famous Hambletonian Stake. Cane died in a hospital here yesterday after an illness of two weeks. He was 81 years old. Cane was active in sports all his life and was widely known as breeder and owner of trotting horses and operator of trotting tracks.

He built up the Hambletonian to become the first $100,000 harness race and was president of Yonkers Raceway, Good Time Park and chairman of the board of Fairgrounds Speedway Trotting Track at Lexington, Ky. Cane, a native of Jersey City, N.J., was the son of a construction man and acquired his father's business. The company erected huge warehouses, terminals, office buildings, hospitals, schools and apartment buildings.

He built the 80,000-seat wooden stadium known as Dempsey-Carpenter heavy-weight fight at Harrison, N.J., in 1921.

The body was flown to Jersey City for funeral services Saturday. Burial will be in Brookside Cemetery at Englewood, N.J.

Jim Conzelman Jr., All-Stater In Three Sports in Rhode Island

Jim Conzelman Jr., son of the former football coach of the Washington University Bears and the professional Chicago Cardinals, is following in the athletic footsteps of his father.

Jim Jr., who will be graduated this spring from Portsmouth Priory, Portsmouth, R.I., was named on three all-Rhode Island high school teams in the last year. Eighteen years old, 6 feet, 3 1/2 inches tall and weighing 195 pounds, young Conzelman was all-state shortstop on the baseball team, batting .413. He made the all-state football team playing end and was center on the basketball team. He will enter Harvard next fall.

Conzelman, Senior, was an outstanding athlete during his high school days in St. Louis. Playing for McKinley, he was chosen on the city all-star team in basketball, football and baseball in 1915. Later he starred on the Washington U. football team.

During World War I, Jim won the middleweight boxing championship at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station and played with the service football team in the Rose Bowl in 1919. Conzelman took a whirl at pro baseball, as manager and catcher with Rock Island in the Mississippi Valley league in 1922. Turning to pro football, Jim was voted most valuable player in the pro league in 1928, as coach and quarterback of the champion Providence Steam Rollers.

St. L. U. High Hurler Allows 1 Hit, Fans 17

By John J. Archibald
When St. Louis U. High went looking for a good man to take over the school's baseball team after the departure of J. Taylor, in charge didn't have to look far. In one of their own classrooms, teaching history, was one of the best baseball men in the area—Jim Robinson.

This is the first season for Robinson as high school coach, but he has successfully directed many of the same Junior Billikens students for many summers as coach of the always-strong Aubuchon-Dennison team in American Legion junior baseball. His Aubuchon club has won the city Legion championship the past two years. In 1949 he led Aubuchon all around the Middle West in a series of elimination tournaments.

While McKinley High provided some of the Aubuchon-Dennison players, there are a number of experienced members of that team who'll be able to help St. Louis U. High in its bid for a state championship. Not being in a league at present, the state series is the Junior Billikens' chief goal.

Robinson's team opened its campaign with a 7-0 non-league victory over DuBois yesterday. George Werley, on the hill for the Junior Bills, yielded only one hit and struck out 17 batters. He walked three batters. Tom Fassler had four out of four, including a homer, to pace the winner's attack.

An independent team has both advantages and disadvantages in its quest for a state baseball title. The advantage is that the team can concentrate entirely on the weekly elimination games, without splitting its pitching staff so as to win league games as well. But a non-league team can be hurt too, for throughout the season it's likely to bat only against second-string pitchers, as the league clubs save their best for the games that count. Then in the state tournament the independent team suddenly comes up against top-flight throwing.

Six members of Robinson's team earned letters for their baseball work with the Junior Bills last spring. Two of them could give St. Louis a powerful pitching staff. One is the big righthander, Werley, and the other is Tom Fassler, who has several seasons' experience at both pitching and in the outfield.

Other lettermen are Jim Helein, catcher; Roy Evers, reserve catcher; Bob Anselmo, third baseman; Hal Fredericks, shortstop; and Jim Wetzel, second baseman.

Non-lettermen, but boys who played on the Legion team, include First Basemen Tom Karst and Jim Wilson, and Mike Wilson, and Mike Faris, an outfielder.

To Play 25 Games.
The Junior Billikens will play a schedule of 25 games before May 16, in addition to state tournament contests. They meet McKinley next Tuesday, and later on will play two games with Ritenour High, whose players eliminated Aubuchon-Dennison in Legion competition and went on to win the state tournament.

In other games, Cogle defeated Alton, 6-3; C.B.C. and DeAndreis played to a 7-7 tie and Riverview Gardens and Lutheran tied at 5-5.

Notre Dame to Seek Third Title in Sugar Bowl Basket Tourney

NEW ORLEANS, March 28 (AP)—Notre Dame will have an opportunity to become the first team ever to win three Sugar Bowl basketball tournaments in succession here, Dec. 29-30.

Chairman Claude Simon of the Sugar Bowl basketball committee, announced today the Irish had been selected as the fourth team to compete in the 1956 tournament.

Selection of Kentucky, St. Louis and Dayton was announced previously.

Notre Dame defeated Holy Cross to win the 1954 tournament, and came back to upset Utah in the 1955 tournament.

Harrisburg High Needs Basket Coach

HARRISBURG, Ill., March 28—The head basketball coaching job at Harrisburg High again is open with Gene Black, who suffered a heart attack this past winter, deciding not to coach next season.

Lawrence Caluffetti, athletic director and head football coach, said the school needed a head basketball coach who could assist in football.

Bowler From Caribbean Command Wins Title

FORT SILL, Okla., March 28 (UP)—Bowlers from the Caribbean Command captured three out of the four top places in men's singles in the All-Army bowling tournament here.

Chuck McGarry rolled the winning score, a three-game tally of 571. Second place went to Charles Kutch, also of the Caribbean Command, with 570, and teammate Charles Ahmed was fourth with 556. John Hadda of Fourth Army was third highest with 566.

In women's singles, Grace Wolschlagler of the European Command cleared 487 to win. Joe Ross of Fifth Army was second with 478, followed by Mary Walters of Fourth Army, 456, and Valera Engles, Sixth Army, 433.

High game in the men's division was bowled by Tom Brozynski of the Far East Command with 223. High-game honors for women went to Mary Walters who hit 182.

Lightburn Favored

CLEVELAND, March 28 (AP)—Those who feel they know enough about boxing to bet money on it were wagering today that the speed and experience of Ludwig Lightburn will prevail over the harder punching of L. C. Morgan in tonight's 10-rounder at the Arena. (The fight will be telecast by KTVI.)

The 21-year-old lightweight is meeting here for the second time. Morgan was favored six months ago when he lost a split decision in an eight-rounder. Today the odds were 2-1 on Lightburn.

McClure Wins M.A.C. Handball Ninth Time

George McClure won the Missouri A.C. handball title for the ninth time, defeating John Shields, 21-11, 21-13.

In Class B, Francis Fabick won from Charles Kohler, 21-17, 21-14.

Fred Thumlin and Bill Bruen will play for the Class C title; and Courtney Shands faces Mitch Murch in Class D.

Mary Magdalen Wins Parochial Girls' Meet

Led by Elizabeth Dyer who scored 12 points, Mary Magdalen defeated Epiphany, 33-17, in the final of the C.Y.C. Parochial girls' basketball tournament yesterday at the Mary Magdalen gym.

Very important to housewives
(and their husbands)

A large share of the good things of life come your way on rails held down by Illinois Central spikes. These same rails help people in your community to earn a living doing business with people in thousands of other places.

That is why transportation is so important to you. The Illinois Central shares the responsibility with other railroads and highway, water and air carriers. Each does certain jobs best and most economically.

But the most economical carrier doesn't always get the job. Even when the Illinois Central can haul freight more economically than trucks, for example, present transport regulations often keep us from giving you the benefit of this economy.

This can be corrected by relying more on competition and less on regulation to set freight rates, according to a Cabinet Committee appointed by the President of the United States.

This Committee believes competitive pricing will save you money. We are for it, because it will help us to serve you and all the people of Mid-America better and more economically.

U.S. SAYS IT WON'T CALL OFF BOMB TEST

Decision Made by President
—Announcement in U.N.
Angers Russians.

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. March 28 (AP) — The United States told the U.N. yesterday that H-bomb tests will be held around Eniwetok next month despite the Marshall Islanders' protests.

A U.S. statement said the matter was considered of such gravity that the decision was made by President Eisenhower himself.

The President, it was said, was convinced that there was at present no practical alternative to going ahead with the tests as scheduled.

The statement quickly touched off a verbal blast by the Soviet delegate in the trusteeship council's special committee on petitions.

The Russian, Vasily F. Grubiyakov, demanded that the U.N. take immediate action to bar A-bomb or H-bomb tests in the U.N. trust territories. He made no formal proposal, however.

The chairman of the six-member committee, Rikhi Jialal of India, also opposed the tests.

The issue of bomb tests in the Marshall Islands has had several airings in the trusteeship council and its committees.

Only a few weeks ago, Russia formally moved that the trusteeship council condemn the proposed test. The resolution was withdrawn, however, when it failed to gain support.

The United States gave the U.N. and the Marshall Islands residents assurances in yesterday's statement that all possible precautionary measures would be taken to see that no one was hurt.

But the statement said the tests must be held because the United States believes further tests are necessary for the eventual well-being of mankind.

End clogged-up nose sleep better tonight

Thousands find this method keeps nose clear all night long

Dry or dusty air, "smog," a head cold, overheated room, allergy . . . all can cause night nose clogging, spoiling your sleep and forcing you into harmful mouth breathing.

Thousands have found that Mentholatum quickly ends this annoying problem. Just apply Mentholatum in each nostril at bedtime. Instantly your nose feels clearer and, during the night, Mentholatum's soothing action relieves that dry, stuffy feeling. Congestion eases and you breathe normally through your nose.

"Why Mouth Breathing is Harmful"
When a clogged nose forces you to breathe through your mouth, you send chilled dry air, laden with dust and germs, directly into your lungs. This and snoring, of course, go hand in hand. Mentholatum in the nose at night ends harmful mouth breathing.

Dr. Blake Views Russian Church
As Island of Faith in Stormy Sea

Concludes It Really Does Oppose Kremlin on Basic Issue of God—Leaders Probably Following Shrewd Policy.

(The Rev. Dr. Eugene Carson
Blake, president of the National Council of Churches, sums up the conference of American and Russian churchmen in this, the last of three articles. Dr.
Blake notes that the views are his own and not to be attributed to other delegates or the Council.)

By EUGENE CARSON BLAKE
NEW YORK, March 28 (AP) —Are the churches in the Soviet Union really able to oppose the government and party on anything? The answer is "yes."

The churches stand for faith in God as opposed to the atheistic materialism of the Communist party and the Soviet Government's educational policy.
This is a flat opposition.

After many years of direct persecution of this faith, the party has been moved, at least tactically, to withdraw from head-on methods of attack.

Since the Russian church leaders revealed themselves to be shrewd enough in their dealings with us, there is no reason to suppose they are—or have been—less than shrewd in dealings with the Communist government.

For American churches now to extend the hand of friendship to the churches there has its peripheral risks, but to have failed to do so would leave more isolated an island of faith, surviving against tremendous odds.

Degree of Opposition.
The Russian churches are opposing one of Communism's deep and unfulfilled aspirations —to demolish belief in God.
Christianity may be the lone force that ultimately changes the court of totalitarian Communism, but the picture is a clouded one.

Even after we had presented the picture of the separation of church and state in the United States and the free enterprise in religion that we enjoy and had heard the Russians speak of their separation of church and state and of their freedom within the limits of their laws, we still were unable to give a simple answer to the question,
"How free are the Russian Churches?"

Communist party secretary Nikita Khrushchev's decree of Nov. 10, 1954, lays down the present policy of the Communist party towards religion.
This line appears to be part of the repudiation of Stalinism that is noted generally in the present Russian scene.

Here as elsewhere there is no turning back by the party from the avowed Communist purpose which in this case is ultimately to destroy religion in favor of atheistic materialism.
But the mistakes of the tactics formerly used against the churches, their members and priests are defined and admitted. All party units are now warned against attacking believers or their clergymen. It is forbidden to wound religious sensibilities. Crude attacks against religion must be avoided.

Rather it is confidently claimed by the Communist party that in the long run it can eliminate religion and its churches by monopolizing the education of youth except for a limited amount allowed in homes or in general church services.

Answers Far From Satisfying.
The answers to our questions as to relation of church and state were depressingly uniform. They went like this:

"There is complete separation of church and state in the Soviet Union. This means noninterference by the state in the affairs of the church and noninterference by the church in the affairs of the state."

It is when the definition of the spheres of church and state is made that the difference between America church freedom and Soviet church freedom appears.

Churches in the Soviet Union cannot educate except in sermons and in theological seminaries and academies unless an occasional visit to a home by ministers or priests is considered an educational program for youth.

The churches cannot comment on political, economic or social matters even when there are moral or spiritual issues involved in them. The conspicuous exception to this has been the churches' campaign in "defense of peace" which, however, they insist was not political.

The churches are confined to the administration of the Sacraments, to the care of adult souls, and the preaching of sermons.
In return for this, the state allows the church to exist, though apparently not to expand.

Financial Support of Churches.
There is indication that the churches receive enough in gifts from believers to operate comfortably on a limited scale, having adequate salaries for clergy, automobiles, janitor personnel, etc.

We were told by the pastor of a very large orthodox parish that its income was 6,000,000 rubles a year. This was divided into 1,250,000 rubles which was sent to the Metropolitan as head of the diocese and the remainder which paid the salaries of a staff of 52 including 10 priests, four deacons, three psalm readers, janitors, chauffeurs and secretaries, and the general expenses of the building and the parish.

Even at a realistic exchange rate of 50 rubles to a dollar (as against the official rate of 4 rubles to a dollar) the budget of this parish would compare favorably with some of the biggest in our country. The difference would be that the constituency to be served would be at best 10 times the size of parishes in this country.

In answer then to the central question of freedom of the which they find themselves.

Perhaps the clearest illustration of this was the remark of a Russian Protestant church leader who, when defending their position with regard to allowing the state to have complete control of youth organizations, said, "We find no mention of youth organizations in the New Testament, therefore we don't have them."

The Russian churches oppose Communism on fundamental ground; they are fighting its efforts to instill atheism throughout the country.

World's Two Basic Struggles.

The fact is that there are two major contests going on in the world today. The first is the contest for the souls of men being waged by religion against secular atheistic and materialistic forces. In this contest the Russian churches must be reckoned as allies of our Christian churches.

The second contest is between totalitarian Communism and western democracy. Here the principals are the U.S.S.R. and its satellites versus the United States and the western powers.

In this second contest the Russian churches must be accounted loyal to the Soviet Union as American churches are loyal to the United States. We do not expect them to perform the function of a conscience of the state in the way we feel our own churches are required to be a conscience to our nation.
The peace of the world and the avoidance of mutually destructive atomic war is the issue in this latter contest.

Our long range hope for the success of finding a way to live at peace in the same world with revolutionary Communist totalitarianism is to hope that it will ultimately be modified from within.

One of the forces that may in the long run modify it is the power of faith of the Christian churches in Russia.

Man Gives Blood to Patrolman Who Arrested, Befriended Him

Remembers Kindness of Officer Who Collected Facts That Cleared Up Case.

A man who was arrested, then befriended by Patrolman Thomas P. Mulrooney several years ago has remembered the kindness by donating blood to the 66-year-old officer who received a shotgun blast in the leg when he interrupted a tavern holdup March 16.

William Hart, a truckdriver, 4048 Robert avenue, said today it all came back to him when he saw Mulrooney's picture in the paper.

Hart remembered it was Mulrooney, detailed to arrest him on a non-support charge brought by a former wife, who took the trouble to get the facts together and take them to the prosecuting attorney's office. As a result, Hart said he was quickly cleared.

"I figured he must have lost a lot of blood so I went to the Carr street station and offered mine," Hart said. "They said no at first, then I got a call." Mulrooney has had nine transfusions and now is believed on the road to recovery.

"It's hard for me to forget," said Hart, "that it was blood transfusions that saved my life after I was wounded on the carrier Lexington in World War II."

Meanwhile police continued to search for a shotgun and pistol which the robbers have said they threw into the Mississippi river from Eads Bridge after fleeing from the scene of the shooting in Joe and Pete's tavern, Ninth and Mullany streets.

James Z. Bradley, 1700 block of South Fourteenth street, and Thomas B. Crews, 2800 block of St. Vincent avenue, were indicted by the circuit court grand jury yesterday on charges of armed robbery and assault with intent to kill in that robbery, in which $600 was taken.

AUGUST W. BOHN DIES IN FLORIDA; EX-ST. LOUISAN

August W. Bohn, an electrical engineer for Wagner Electric Corp. until his retirement in 1949, died today at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., after a long illness. He was 71 years old.

Funeral services will be in Fort Lauderdale Friday with burial there. Mr. Bohn lived at 8612 Park lane before leaving St. Louis. He started his 64-year employment at Wagner as a motor fitter and was made foreman of motor test in 1914. He was transferred to the engineering department in 1927.

Surviving are his wife, a son, Arthur J. Bohn, both of Fort Lauderdale, and a daughter, Mrs. Vera M. Scott, St. Louis.

STEVENSON WINS NOMINATION—IN MOCK ELECTION

Adlai Stevenson was an easy winner of the Democratic nomination for President yesterday in a mock primary election among students at Fontbonne College.

Stevenson defeated Stuart Symington, Missouri's "favorite son," by a 2-to-1 vote while Estes Kefauver was a poor third. Symington was "selected" for Vice President on the Democratic ticket in a write-in vote.

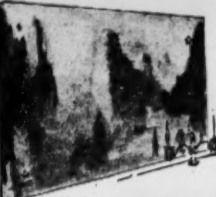

President Eisenhower had no opposition in the Republican "primary." In a write-in campaign, Vice President Richard Nixon was renominated for his present post. Two hundred and seventeen of the 355 students at the college took part in the election.

About 56 per cent asked for Democratic ballots. Fontbonne delegations for Stevenson and Mr. Eisenhower will go to Lindenwood College April 19-21 to attend a student political convention there.

JOVIAL MALENKOV IN LONDON AFTER 'WONDERFUL TRIP'

LONDON, March 28 (AP)—Georgi Malenkov returned to London today from a tour of power plants in north England and Scotland—and spoke enthusiastically about children, scenery and the joys of friendship.

The former Soviet Premier flew back from Scotland in a chartered Vickers Viscount turbo-prop airplane. He waved to bystanders and posed for photographers at the airport.

"It has been a wonderful trip," he said via an interpreter. Malenkov, now Soviet Minister of Power Stations, officially is here on a three-week tour of British electrical and power plants. Unofficially his main job has been to make friends as a front-runner for next month's visit by Soviet Premier Bulganin and Communist party chief Nikita Khrushchev.

Throughout his junketing, he has patted children on the head, talked to honeymooning couples, strolled along sidewalks, and visited the people in their homes.

STATE URGED TO SEEK NEW INDUSTRIES

Rail Freight Increase Will Attract Firms to Midwest, Official Says.

Missouri communities should be prepared to take advantage of attracting new industries which will move into the Midwest from the East and West as the result of the recent rail freight increase, Lisle Jeffrey, industrial director for the Missouri Division of Resources and Development, said here yesterday.

Speaking before the convention of Missouri Association of Municipal Utilities at Hotel Statler, he warned that many Missouri cities do not have available the basic information about their own communities that industries find essential in making a decision to locate.

He emphasized that the municipality itself must take the responsibility to compile and provide that essential information.

"Whether we in Missouri get our share of the 13 billion dollars planned in new and expanded industrial facilities in 1956 depends on whether that responsibility is carried out," he said. "Remember, you are in a competitive business when you are seeking new industries in your town."

In urging utility representatives to take an active part in attracting industries, Jeffrey recommended they provide full rate schedules, capacity figures and expansion plans to community groups charged with compiling information.

In another session of the convention, which ended yesterday, Marvin Graham, superintendent of municipal utilities at Fredericktown, was elected president of the association. He succeeds Hubert Hinton, superintendent at Marshall.

H. D. Milltr, general manager of City Utilities, Springfield, was named vice president. Wendell Locke, also of Springfield, was re-elected secretary-treasurer.

SUSPECT ADMITS SLUGGING WATCHMAN, POLICE REPORT

Earl Lee Kilgore, a laborer of the 5200 block of Minerva avenue, admitted that he slugged and robbed a watchman at the Evans & Howard Sewer Pipe Co., 5200 Manchester avenue, last Saturday, police reported.

Kilgore, a Negro, at first denied striking Edward Fenner, 72 years old, with an iron pipe. Later he told Detective Cpl. Fred Owens and Detective Robert Zehnbauser that he "tapped" Fenner on the head and took $12 from him because he needed money after his automobile was towed away for illegal parking.

A warrant charging Kilgore with assault to do great bodily harm was issued yesterday. A robbery warrant was sought today. Fenner is in a serious condition at Missouri Baptist Hospital, suffering from a fractured skull.

Argentina Retires 80 Officers. BUENOS AIRES, March 28 (AP) — Forced retirement of about 80 army officers including Maj. Alfredo Maximo Renner, former secretary and aide of exiled ex-President Juan D. Peron, was announced yesterday.

U.S.-BUILT TANKS BEING UNLOADED IN SAUDI ARABIA

BAHREIN, Persian Gulf, March 28 (AP)—Eighteen American-built Walker Bulldog tanks have reached Saudi Arabia aboard an American ship and are being unloaded at the Saudi Arabian port of Dammam, it was reported here today.

Reports reaching this British protectorate from the nearby mainland said the United States freighter James Monroe arrived in Dammam yesterday with the tanks on deck. The vessel left New York Feb. 20.

No special security arrangements were taken, but Saudi Arabian authorities gave the controversial tank shipment special priority over other shipping.

The tanks were sold to Saudi Arabia over the objections of the Israeli government which has been unsuccessful in efforts to buy arms from the United States. The United States agreed last August to supply the tanks for training purposes in return for certain rights, including the use of air bases in Saudi Arabia.

THREE GUARDS SUSPENDED IN ESCAPE OF PRISONER

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
JEFFERSON CITY, March 28—Suspension of three state penitentiary guards following escape of a convict Monday was announced today by Warden E. V. Nash.

The three men, each suspended for five days without pay for not complying with security rules, were R. T. Buckner of Moberly, guard-driver of a truck; Jesse L. Lane of Worth and Rudy Finley of Jefferson City, guards on duty at the prison's truck gate. Nash said Buckner resigned following the suspension.

Dean W. Hancock, St. Louis county convict under five-year sentence for robbery of a filling station, escaped by hiding in a barrel which was hauled from the prison commissary, with other supplies for the church prison farm, five miles west of Jefferson City. He is still at large.

It isn't the low price that makes Chevrolet the most popular car going. It's the looks and quality of the only Fisher Body in its field—the ride and roadability—the championship power and performance.

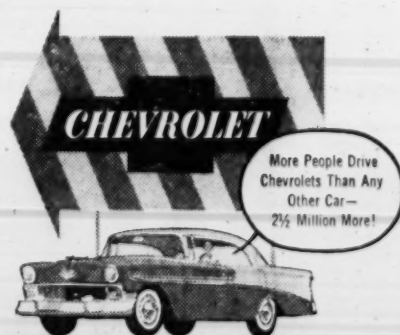

Sure Chevrolet's low price is important. It saves you plenty, when you consider what most other cars cost.

But even more important to you are the qualities you get in a new Chevrolet. Like its record-breaking performance (horsepower ranges up to 225!) and nailed-down stability. Then, there's the solid construction of its stylish Body by Fisher.

These are just a few of the things that go to make driving more satisfying—and safer—in a Chevy. They're the real reasons why this new Chevrolet is making so many friends so fast. Driven one yet? We'll be happy to arrange it.

Air conditioning—temperatures made to order—at new low cost. Let us demonstrate!

HARD WINDSTORM PILES UP DRIFTS OF DUST IN WEST

Extends 800 Miles From Wyoming to Texas—
Wheat Damage
Heavy.

DENVER, March 28 (AP)—The first severe windstorm of the year east an eerie wall of dust over a six-state area of the prairie west today. It covered an 800-mile path from Cheyenne, Wyo., to Waco, Tex.

The storm sent grimy clouds boiling to 20,000 feet above sea level, forced rerouting of some airline flights, and left heavy damage to spring crops, grazing land and range animals.

In eastern Colorado alone, federal agriculture officials estimated up to 75 per cent of the state's 3,400,000 acres of winter wheat was blown aloft.

The weatherman predicted relief for southern Wyoming, Colorado and New Mexico today. But there was little let-up in the ferocious winds that battered Kansas, Oklahoma and north Texas.

Half-Mile Visibility. Visibility ranging from a half mile to three miles was reported at Garden City and Dodge City in Kansas, at Childress, Amarillo, Lubbock and Dallas in Texas. Similar and worse conditions existed yesterday in Colorado.

Several eastern Colorado towns reported wind gusts to 85 miles an hour. Gusts were clocked at 75 miles an hour at Cheyenne, and at 54 miles an hour in Denver.

The Colorado Highway Patrol closed U. S. 40-287 and U. S. 24 between Limon and the Kansas border for more than eight hours. Three hundred motorists were given emergency shelter at Kit Carson, where residents reported visibility cut to less than a city block.

As the winds receded at dark yesterday, all roads in Colorado were reported open. Some Colorado schools had been closed during the day.

Bus drivers reported dust drifting two and three feet high along fence rows in eastern Colorado and western Kansas, agriculturally rich areas which have been hammered for four years by severe winds and drought.

Buses Stalled. Buses were stalled for as long as two hours at some points when drifted dust obscured the road.

United Air Lines reported some westbound flights delayed as much as 80 minutes by strong headwinds and rerouting. Pilots reported a huge dust cloud 20,000 feet high over southeast Colorado.

The area is the same as that inspected last year by Secretary of Agriculture Benson on a flying trip west. Much of it is in the same left in desert wastelands during the dust bowl years of the 1930s.

STEVENSON GOES TO CALIFORNIA TO RECUP PRESTIGE

Follows on Heels of Kefauver — Backers
Urge Him to 'Run Scared' in Primary.

By EDWARD A. HARRIS
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

LOS ANGELES, March 28—On the heels of Senator Estes Kefauver's departure last night after a five-day handshaking, speaking tour, Adlai S. Stevenson headed here today in an attempt to recoup his sagging political prestige.

Stevenson's advisers here, with a new look at the national political picture, are now asking Stevenson to "run scared" in his bid to win the June 5 preferential primary in California. Stevenson canceled out a planned vacation trip to Florida in order to hurry here to renew his campaign.

He will make a television address early this evening, confer with many of his campaign leaders and tour the garment center tomorrow before flying to San Francisco for a similar one-day stand.

Meanwhile, smoldering bitterness between the Kefauver and Stevenson camps here flared into the open with the blunt accusation by Mrs. Clara Shipper that National Committee Chairman Paul Butler broke his word to her that he would remain neutral in the pre-convention party campaigning.

Assaults Remarks. Mrs. Shipper, national committeewoman of California and vice chairman of the national Kefauver campaign, sent a telegram to Butler assailing his remarks on the results of the Minnesota primary, in which Kefauver won an important victory.

She said that when Butler was seeking election as national chairman he personally telephoned her from Indiana to seek her support. Butler gave her his word that he would maintain strict neutrality in the race for the party presidential nomination, she said, and on the basis of this pledge she backed him. On several other occasions also, she said, Butler gave assurances of his neutrality.

Despite these assurances, she said, Butler called Stevenson's defeat in Minnesota a blessing in disguise, because the "front-runner must have a pace-setter."

In making this statement, she said, Butler clearly "showed his partisanship." She added: "All that Senator Kefauver has ever asked was the opportunity for a fair hearing and a clear field in which to run. Like the voters of Minnesota, California's voters have a tradition of independence. I believe they will resent this effort by the national chairman to influence their thinking."

Kefauver's Speech. Senator Kefauver, in his final address here last night before departing, attacked the Eisenhower Administration for failing to cope adequately with public school construction needs, proposed an annual appropriation of $500,000,000 for school aid and suggested also the creation of a Cabinet post devoted to the problems and the needs of youth.

He said that crowded classrooms, double shifts, overburdened teachers, are setting back the education of countless children. For many years, he said, effective federal action to cope with the problem has been postponed, but it now appears that this session of Congress may get a bill through to provide some aid.

"The tradition in this country has always been to treat education as a local problem," he declared. "It can no longer be so treated. We cannot afford as a nation to have great inequalities in educational opportunities as between our richer and our poorer states."

COMPANY

Through doors like these, in 30 cities, pass more than 20,000 men each month—sent by their dealers to learn about the latest engineering developments of GM cars.

Success is our business —and our dealers', too

That's why 30 new Training Centers for GM dealers' mechanics are filled month after month

IT ISN'T EASY to please the American public—and unless you do, you cannot expect to operate a growing business.

So we go all out each year, to win the public's favor.

Each year, General Motors cars present fresh new styling.

And—when the public likes what it sees—it rewards us by buying Chevrolets, Pontiacs, Oldsmobiles, Buicks and Cadillacs.

The dealers who sell GM cars share in this success—but their share isn't automatic.

There are approximately 15,000 parts in an automobile, and it's the dealers' responsibility to see that they work satisfactorily.

But we don't ask them to carry this responsibility alone.

Each new crop of engineering advances creates the need for keeping the dealers' service mechanics abreast of the factory engineers.

They need to know how to match, with new knowledge and skills, the factory know-how which made these advances possible.

They need to know the simplest way to take each new thing apart and put it together—and how to use the special new tools developed to make their work easy.

So you'll find today, in 30 cities throughout the United States, GM's answer and GM dealers' answer to this challenge.

Specially equipped, specially staffed with trained experts, these Training Centers give individual training to every mechanic who enrolls—and enrollments of mechanics and other dealer personnel are running at the rate of more than 20,000 a month.

There's nothing like this Training Center program anywhere else in the automobile industry.

And now that it is in full operation, we believe this fact is clear:

The vast majority of General Motors dealers aim to deserve all the success that has come their way.

EXECUTIVES PAID $12,266,055 BY 20 PLANE FIRMS

Senate Report Shows No Relationship to Net Profits — Doing Business With U. S.

WASHINGTON, March 28 (AP)—A Senate subcommittee reported yesterday that officials of 20 aircraft companies doing business with the government received an estimated $12,266,055 in remuneration last year.

The report, prepared by an armed services subcommittee as part of its evaluation of the nation's air power, did not show the relationship of remuneration to net profit, since profit figures were not complete at the time the report was drafted. But in 1954, the report showed, the officers and directors received $10,747,201, or about 2 per cent of a net profit of $525,707,279 before income taxes.

"No effort has been made to pass on the reasonableness of the remuneration paid to officers and directors," Senator Johnson (Dem., Texas) subcommittee chairman, said in a letter of transmittal to the full Armed Services Committee.

"The report is strictly a compilation which we feel should be made available to the public as one more segment of our overall study of the aircraft industry."

An introduction to the report pointed out the cost of aircraft production "has become one of the major expenditures in our national budget."

"Since the production and development of airplanes will not be diminished in the years ahead, the subcommittee feels the costs associated with increased production should be carefully scrutinized," it added. The figures presented did not differentiate between commercial and government business, but it was noted that most of the business done by the companies is under government contract. Names of individuals receiving the remuneration were not included, since "it is felt no useful purpose would be served" by such disclosure.

The first table in the report covers the operations of 18 companies in 1949. At that time, just before the Korean war, profits before income taxes were at a $75,000,000 level and remuneration paid to officers totaled $5,142,588.

Hearings were held by a House armed services subcommittee last month to look into the salaries of top aircraft executives. This investigation built up a picture of aircraft manufacturers prospering highly on government contracts fulfilled in some cases in rent-free government buildings.

Beech, $421,477; Bell, $575,942; Boeing, $856,255; Cessna, $210,630; Chance Vought, $413,843; Curtis Wright, $882,627; Douglas, $833,650; Fairchild, $1,059,050; General Dynamics (including the Consolidated Vultee division), $1,343,781; Gruman, $521,687; Lockheed, $922,498; Glenn L. Martin, $503,511; McDonnell, $333,993; North American, $807,208; Northrup, $654,785; Piper, $96,943; Republic, $646,408; Ryan, $237,372; United Aircraft, $1,144,795.

PENNSY STRIKE POSTPONED

PHILADELPHIA, March 28 (AP)—Mediation talks will begin here today to settle a dispute between the Transport Workers Union and the Pennsylvania Railroad.

The strike had been set to begin at midnight tonight. The National Mediation Service in Washington said the T.W.U. postponed the walkout indefinitely, pending the outcome of the mediation talks. The strike was called late Thursday by the union over layoffs of maintenance workers.

ADMINISTRATION SWITCHES PLANS ON CIVIL RIGHTS

WASHINGTON, March 28 (AP)—The Eisenhower Administration passed word it would submit new civil rights legislation to Congress today, then changed its mind.

There was no official explanation for the switch in plans, but Department of Justice officials were reported to be redrafting the language of the proposals. Indications were that dispatch of the proposals to Congress would be delayed until after the Legislators return April 8 from an Easter recess beginning late tomorrow.

The department's bills were reported to include creation by Congress of a civil rights commission, as proposed in the President's State of the Union message.

One concept is that this group should have subpoena powers which it would use in looking into all types of complaints of denial of civil rights. Another department idea is to have Congress create a new special division in the Justice Department, to be headed by a new assistant attorney general, supervising all civil rights matters. The present handling is by a civil rights section functioning in the criminal division.

CLEANS AND RECLEANS YOUR WASH WATER 5 TIMES

Here's How the Filter-Flo Washing System Works Wash water circulates and filters at the rate of six gallons a minute to give you clean, bright clothes. As the washbasket continuously overflows, soap scum floats away. Sand settles out at the bottom of the washbasket. Lint is trapped in the filter which lets only cleansed, sudsy water flow back into the washbasket.

NO LINT

Here's Proof that the new G-E Filter-Flo washer washes clothes without leaving lint fuzz! After 11 washings in an ordinary washer, the sock at left was flecked with lint. After 11 washings the G-E way, an identical sock showed practically no lint.

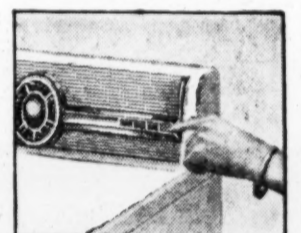

HOLDS MORE

Activator* Washing: Action dips, flexes and cleanses clothes, piece by piece, gently and thoroughly washing them as though by hand.

SAVES WATER

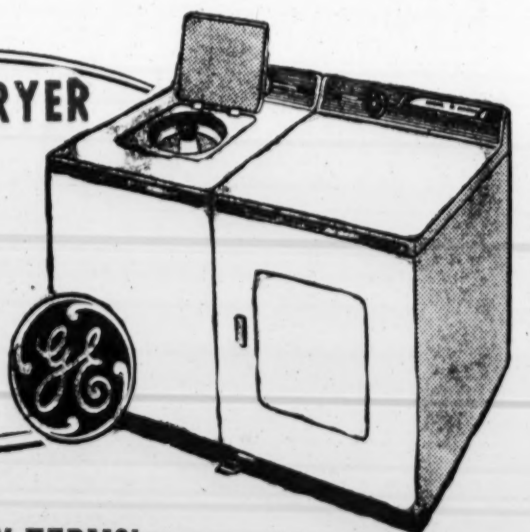

Water Saver saves detergent and gallons of hot water when you do small loads.

Matching DRYER with Automatic Clothes Conditioning

Set the control for the fabric you are drying—delicate, normal or heavy—and the control automatically adjusts the temperature to the fabrics as they dry. Eliminates over-drying and under-drying. Many clothes can be taken from the dryer and worn or put away without ironing. New Air Freshener adds a fresh, breezy scent to your clothes. They smell "Sunshine Fresh" without the danger of sun fading.

NEW ZOO ARRIVAL

Young ocelot, one of 60 new animals acquired by the St. Louis Zoo, sits begging for food in its cage after arriving at the zoo today. Keepers said the animal is tame and playful, and offered no resistance when collar and chain were removed from its neck this morning. Among the new specimens brought on an all-night trip from Chicago by station wagon were a chimpanzee, humming birds, a Savannah fox and electric eels, which made the long journey in a plastic container immersed in water.

Wind in the West

Big sheets of plywood being whipped through dusty air near Denver yesterday as the season's first big dust storm swirled through arid areas of the West. Highway and airline travel was disrupted as grimy clouds boiled along an 800-mile path from Cheyenne, Wyo., to Waco, Tex. Officials estimated most of the winter wheat crop in eastern Colorado was blown out. Winds were expected to ease in Wyoming, Colorado and New Mexico today but continued dust was likely in Kansas, Oklahoma and north Texas.

Movie actress Anita Ekberg and actor Anthony Steel displaying their engagement rings in Hollywood yesterday after announcing their plans to be married. Miss Ekberg's ring has a square cut emerald surrounded by diamonds and the British movie actor's is a plain gold band, worn next to a family ring. Engagement rings on little fingers is continental variation of third-finger custom.

SIGN OF THE TIMES

West Berliners, unable to resist the opportunity for a passing quip on the current Soviet turnabout on the former Red dictator, erecting timely sign on border between the Russian and American sectors of Berlin. Ostensibly directing visitors to Stalin Allee . . . or Stalin avenue, East Berlin's main thoroughfare . . . the sign was altered to read Stalin Alley, which means "Stalin Gone." The rest of the sign, protesting against the division of Berlin, reads: "Away With the Fence! Away With Controls!"

Self-Veneration
Among the Show Folk

By John Crosby

NEW YORK, March 28.

WE have got through the award season, the annual orgy of self-veneration among the show folk which I sometimes think should be conducted in the dark of the moon on a hillside in darkest Wyoming. But, of course, it isn't. The Emmys and Oscars are handed out on national television hookups for the edification of the millions, which gives the prizes a sort of national halo of prestige which they hardly warrant.

JOHN CROSBY

This year, for sheer tastelessness, ennui and lack of showmanship, the Emmy awards set a new high watermark that it will be hard to top next year. But don't count on it. With a little extra added effort they might. The Academy Awards, on the other hand, were quite a well-conducted affair with Jerry Lewis as master of ceremonies suppressing his normal exuberance to a decent degree and giving a very winning performance.

I SUPPOSE most people are genuinely interested in the best movie, best actor and best actress awards, but I have yet to encounter a layman who could get very excited over the best audio engineering or whatever the thing is. If the movie people are permitted to pat each other on the back for their technical achievements before a nation-wide TV audience, I don't know why the Long Island Railroad couldn't hand out awards on a national hookup for best brakeman.

In an effort to make the picture industry look as well groomed as possible, the Academy trotted out an all-star cast—Jennifer Jones (on film from London), Marlon Brando (on film from Manila), Eva Marie Saint, Grace Kelly and Audrey Hepburn who handed the Oscars out with a minimum of hoopla.

But while the Oscars were handled gracefully, the commercials weren't. I don't know how much Oldsmobile paid for the hour-and-three-quarter telecast, but they were terribly determined to get their money's worth. The commercials went on and on and on to such a degree that Jerry Lewis came on after one particularly tedious one to say: "And now a few words about the Academy Awards."

AS FOR THE EMMYS, I have viewed this award with a deep-seated distrust ever since it was started. The first Emmys were strictly a Hollywood party, and since at the time about 80 per cent of network TV came from the East, this was strictly ridiculous. Programs that had never been seen outside Los Angeles got Emmys.

This year a special effort was made to divide the loot up evenly between East and West Coast, but this only resulted in there being entirely too much loot. There were 41 Emmy categories including best specialized visual contribution, best engineering technical achievement, best commercial campaign, and heaven knows what else. It has always seemed to me the whole idea of awards is lost if you start handing them out by the bushel basket. There are many worthy folk in obscure branches of television, but you don't have to give them all awards. Next thing you know they'll be giving an Emmy for best inter-office memo.

AS A RESULT of this profligacy, some people like Phil Silvers and Nanette Fabray wound up with an armload of awards between them. Mary Martin, best actress, and Lloyd Nolan, best actor, won awards for what were essentially Broadway performances that had simply been repeated for television.

However, TV, which acquitted itself badly in the award presentation department for its own medium, did pretty well in the other one. Best actor award went to Ernest Borgnine who came out of television, and best movie went to "Marty" which was originally a TV drama. "Marty," in fact, has now won most of the top honors, both here and abroad and, next time you hear that television has produced nothing but mediocrity, you might just drop the fact into the conversation.

Alcoholic's Wife

By Dr. Paul Popenoe

FEW difficulties in marriage are greater than those which face the wife of an alcoholic. Much of my mail consists of tragic letters from women facing this problem. A Seattle investigator, Joan K. Jackson, made a study of the subject and thought she could recognize seven stages through which such a wife is likely to pass:

1. At first there is an attempt to deny the problem. The wife reproaches but later feels guilty—perhaps she is really exaggerating it, after all. Maybe she'd better close her eyes, forget about it.

2. Then she begins to try to cover up. She lies to the employer, she fibs to the children, she is increasingly isolated from friends and increasingly resentful of her husband. She begins to feel that she is a failure as a wife.

3. This leads her either to nag incessantly or to sulk in silent self-sympathy. She is beset by fears for the future.

4. She may now decide that she will have to take over all family responsibilities. She can't trust him an inch, so she will have to take the finances out of his hands, make all plans and decisions herself. This is likely to aggravate his behavior; he is resentfully sullen or resentfully violent.

5. She leaves him.

6. She tries to reorganize the family unit without him. She has all the difficulties of any woman undertaking such a task, with the great added difficulty that he is frequently appearing, drunk or sober, and trying to force his way back into the home, to assert his interest in the children, to insist that she owes it to him to "give him another chance."

7. The stage for the last act may have one or the other of two contrasting sets. Either she goes ahead alone, or if he has finally taken steps to straighten himself out she takes him back and faces the touchy problem of reorganizing family relations.

No wife should face these difficulties alone, without competent help. Her first need is to study the subject, learn how others have proceeded, and what resources are available.

Social Problems

By Emily Post

DEAR Mrs. Post: My daughter is to be married soon. She groom-to-be has grandparents living on both sides, or his family. On the bride's side only the paternal grandparents are living—her maternal grandparents having died many years ago. In the newspaper write up, would it be correct to mention her maternal grandparents?

Answer: If the deceased grandparents were very well known they would be mentioned, but not ordinarily.

Stories From the Life of Jesus

The Arrest in Gethsemane

Disciples Flee When Roman Soldiers Seize Jesus

By April Oursler Armstrong

IT was well after nine o'clock and quite dark when Judas, ready to betray his Master, came out the back doorway of the house of Annas, and into the alley. There the Temple guards and the Roman soldiers collected by the high priest Caiaphas waited. They carried lanterns and torches, clubs and staves, and swords.

Judas turned his back on them, leading them around a corner into a jagged and poisonous-smelling little street. Not a sound was heard, except the shuffling feet of the men, the clank of armor, and the lonely howl of some faraway dog. Zig-zag through the streets they went. Pale in the light of spring stars loomed the Temple, and out through a gate they went, and down the steep hills.

Across the brook Kedron, Judas led them, and up toward the Mount of Olives.

The soldiers began to grumble.

"We have heard strange tales about this Jesus," they said.

"They say He has mysterious powers. He can raise men from the dead, and walk on the sea, and feed thousands of people with only a few loaves and fishes. He is a man to be feared."

"He has never harmed anyone," said Judas.

"Where is He?"

"In a farm yard—a place where off it pressed out of the olives. Some call it the Garden of Gethsemane," said Judas over his shoulder. "It is really a series of gardens, with walls. He has been there often, but never so late. Any other night He and His followers would be at the house of friends."

"What are they doing in the garden?" growled a soldier.

"I don't know. But there is nothing to fear. No one could fear Jesus!"

The 30 silver coins jingled in his bag as Judas sighed heavily and led the long column of men and hissing torches. Presently Judas called softly and lifted his hand, and they halted at a high hedge.

Now most of the party knew where they were. This was the farm yard with the oil press—a dark patch of olive trees, not far from the high road to Bethany.

A little door-like opening had been cut in the hedge around the olive garden. Judas waved back the guards while he leaned in and peered. With narrowing eyes Judas searched among the gnarled and hunchbacked trees. His long, shrewish nose sniffed the soft orchard smell and the damp sweetness of night greenery. His peaked ears caught the deep sound of the wind, coughing and murmuring through those ancient olive boughs.

But where were the other 11 apostles and the Master?

Dimly Judas began to make them out.

JUDAS WAITED FOR NO MORE. "NOW IS THE TIME. LET US GO IN AND TAKE HIM. HE WILL BE THE ONE I WILL KISS."

Far off, in a different part of the Garden, he saw eight dark smudges of shadow under the trees. Those must be some of the apostles. And there, nearer to the hedge, in this part of the Garden, three more forms. That vast hunk of man sprawled on the grass, his head on a rolled-up cloak, was surely Peter, snoring. The slim form there by the pavilion was John, also deep in slumber. And that hulk under the biggest olive tree was James—John's brother, of course. They were all asleep.

But where was Jesus? Judas could not see him.

JUDAS would have entered then and brought the guards with him, but he was stopped by the sound of a familiar voice at prayer. He stood listening. Somewhere off in the deeper greenery there, where he remembered a white boulder half buried in the earth, Jesus of Nazareth was on His knees. Judas could hear the suffering voice:

"My Father! If it be possible, let this chalice pass from Me!"

Judas twisted his nose in scorn. "Afraid!" he murmured. "He is afraid! He is praying to be let off—to escape—"

But Jesus was not praying with His prayer.

"Nevertheless," prayed Jesus, "not as I will, but as You will!"

Then Judas was startled, because of that prayer in Gethsemane. The Master wanted not to die—yet if the Father insisted, knowing what was best, then He would obediently take death.

What a way to pray! thought Judas. Such humbleness could not be right for a man. Most men prayed to tell God what they wanted, to strike a bargain with God. But not Jesus. Instead of forcing His will, He seemed to try to understand God's will so that He might obey it.

The silence after the prayer was touched by a low, swishing sound as of a trailing robe brushing the grass. Out of the dark and walking by starlight, the white figure of Jesus appeared, moving toward a sleeping disciple. Judas could see Him clearly now—tall, robed, walking barefoot across the chilly field. Jesus bent over the snoring men.

"Peter! Peter! Put up your sword. . . . Do you think I cannot give Me at once more than 12 legions of angels? How then shall the Scriptures be fulfilled—for this is the way it must be done."

A little soldier from the Temple scurried forward with a handful of ropes and began to tie the wrists of Jesus. And seeing that, fear overwhelmed the disciples.

This sudden invasion of men in armor and others with cudgels and staves filled them with fright. The torches blazed and flamed. Voices rose in bawling question. Peter and all the other could take no more. Stampeded, like wild creatures, they scampered off into the night. Leaping the hedges and running as fast as legs could carry them, they left Jesus, the captive, alone.

He had done nothing to save Himself.

And as Judas, skulking in the flickering shadows, watched the Master bound, he remembered the strange, humble words of Christ's prayer.

"Lord, not My will, but Thine, be done."

From the book: "Stories From the Life of Jesus." Copyright 1956 by April Oursler Armstrong and Grace Perkins Oursler.

Brain Game

THE subject of today's quiz is islands. Six correct answers is excellent.

1. Who gave the Ladrone Islands their name?
2. What do we now call the Sandwich Islands?
3. Who named Greenland?
4. Who named the island of San Salvador?
5. Which country formerly owned the Virgin Islands?
6. Which country owns the Orkney Islands?
7. Which country owns the Gilbert Islands?
8. Nicosia is a city on which island?

Answers
1. Magellan. 2. Hawaiian Islands. 3. Eric the Red. 4. Columbus. 5. Denmark. 6. Scotland. 7. Great Britain. 8. Cyprus.

patients. Families can help when the patient comes home.

Answer to Question 3

Because it increases their power over other people and improves their personalities. One psychologist had 226 high school girls listen to recorded specimens of prose and poetry—some records with distinct enunciation, some, indistinct. Indistinct enunciations decreased comprehension of prose 57 per cent, and of poetry, 41 per cent. Hardly one person in a thousand has ever spent five minutes cultivating his speaking voice. He loses an immense amount in power over people and personality.

Let's Explore Your Mind

By Dr. Albert E. Wiggam

1. SHOULD THE BOSS ALLOW COMPLAINER TO TELL HIS STORY WITHOUT INTERRUPTION? YES ☐ NO ☐

Answer to Question 1

YES, not only allow but urge him. Nothing warms your heart like feeling you have sympathy from the start. It is easier to settle the complaint when you know the boss understands your side in full. This opens the way for frank and full discussion of both sides. This is the advice of Glenn Gardner, author of many books on industrial relations and originator of the 10-hour foreman training program, adopted by the United States and Canada for defense plants during World War II.

Answer to Question 2

Yes. Science Service says a "revolutionary movement" is under way in mental hospitals—removing locks from doors, bars from windows, etc., except for rare extreme patients. Where patients are locked in, they cannot learn to adjust themselves to mental health. Swimming pools, games, dances, beauty treatment for women, etc., are replacing locks and bars. Some new drugs are helpful to some

Wallpaper Problem

By Elizabeth Hillyer

WALLPAPER goes on plaster board walls very well. The trouble comes up in getting it off. That's why new homeowners often believe that they must resist attractive wallpaper, and it is true that dry wall construction presents a special problem—but it's an easy one to solve.

The danger in steaming and stripping off plaster board is that much of the paper facing may come off with it, and the core may soften and show deep scrape marks.

There's a piece of furniture at your house which would be twice as nice if the finish were beautiful. Send for Elizabeth Hillyer's "Furniture Refinishing—How To Do It Yourself," and learn how to bring out good looks you never knew your furniture had. Address Miss Hillyer at The Post-Dispatch and enclose 15 cents in coin, please, with a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

fine humor. . . . Meaning, one presumes, "Clock" doesn't give a good time.

THE CINEMAGIANS: Mario Lanza's golden tonsils vibrate again in "Serenade," a generally entertaining yarn enhanced by Mario's melodious thunder. . . . "Hot Blood" is a not-so-hot melodrama. Its chief asset is Jane Russell's figger. . . . "Touch and Go," an easy-going British spoof, is as pleasant as afternoon tea. . . . "The Killer in Loose" confronts audiences with a mystery: Who killed your time? . . . "House of Riccardi" is suitable for opera fans. Arpeggios and cadenzas galore. . . . "Anything Goes" has Cole Porter's happy sounds, Bing's patented wai-waiing, Donald O'Connor's hippety-hoppy-hoofing and Jeanne's epide-mis. . . . Strangely, the movie is disappointing. It is merely a good picture that should've been great.

STAGE DOOR: "My Fair Lady," the tuneful version of Shaw's "Pygmalion," will probably earn more than any of that writer's dramas. "Pygmalion" by the way, was his initial hit. . . . Oscar-winning Anna Magnani once explained her acting technique: "When I suffer, I must suffer till my heart breaks. Ugly Magnani is full of the beauty of suffering and experience." . . . Which reminds us that Anna and co-winner Ernest Borgnine have talent instead of the traditional Hollywood glimmer. . . . "Patterns," a forthcoming film, has a unique aspect. No background music. . . . Talk about British-American alliances: Joan Collins of London rejoiced: "Hollywood is cool, crazy and jolly good" (Dig that crazy pip-pip). . . . "My Fair Lady," the No. 1 hit musical is 40 per cent owned by CBS (which put up the entire cost, $360,000). Producer H. Levin kept 60 per cent (half of which he shares with the author and composer who brought it to him) after other showmen shrugged it off.

THE STORY-TELLER: New Yorkers who shivered in the blizzards will find little comfort in the Satepost piece called "Cold Weather Ahead." . . . The author discloses that in 1965 (or 1970) the Northeastern States will get Arctic blasts similar to those in the 1830s. . . . When New York harbor froze solid. . . . Theater Arts has an engaging report from Berlin titled: "Caught in a Berlin Literary Cabaret." . . . A foursome of talented young people (called the Porcupines) star at their own spot, the Eternal Lamp, and the literati jam it nightly. The players write their own sketches and songs which lampoon Germany's sacred cows. Even the Reds, who laugh, too. . . . In her book, "R.S.V.P." Elsa Maxwell (70) concludes: "I don't need glasses, benz-drine or a psychiatrist." . . . There isn't a dull page in it. . . . Fannie Hurst's complaint: "Too many celebrities grow simply great—instead of great simply."

THE QUOTOGENIC: Rosalind Paige: Enjoyable as the climax of a yawn. . . . F. J. Jones: The easiest way to get rid of weight is to leave it on the plate. . . . A. Karr: Some people are always grumbling because roses have thorns. I am thankful that thorns have roses. . . . Vera Niva: Lonely as a clock ticking to itself. . . . Anon: Diplomacy is the art of saying "nice doggie" until you can find a rock.

Losing a Term

By Angelo Patri

"JOHN HENRY is failing in arithmetic. He cannot seem to understand any example in percentage. If it asks only that he find a per cent of a round number he can manage, but when the problem gives him the rate and the percentage to find the amount, he is lost. Unless he can make up his work, he will have to stay back this term."

"Sue lost six weeks of school when she had pneumonia. She is consequently very weak in three subjects, arithmetic and geography and history, the social science group, you know. We think it best that she repeat the grade."

When such notes go home, the parents' first reaction is usually, "But surely this work can be made up. Why should the child lose a whole term? We'll get a tutor for him. He can have extra lessons so he can catch up."

IT WOULD BE A GOOD IDEA to think twice about this sort of thing. The pupil who cannot think through a problem in arithmetic, when it has been explained over and over, is likely to need a rest from the task rather than extra doses of it. All pupils are not ready to learn all subjects of their grade at the same time or rate. Some of them seem to stand still in a given subject. When they are granted time to develop the necessary power, they pick up speed and go ahead nicely.

One such pupil lost his way in algebra. He mastered the four operations without trouble, but when faced by a simple equation he was a blank. "Never mind," said the teacher after repeated attempts to get him to understand, "just do the ones you can do and let the others ride. It will come to you by and by."

ONE DAY HE CALLED OUT IN GLEE, "I've caught on. I got it. See. You do this and this and this and you've got it. Gee. I thought I never would see through that." A little span of grace did the work.

The child who lost time through illness is in about the same predicament. Some illnesses that children suffer have long-lasting effects. They should be given all the time they need to recuperate. Many times, they are not able or ready to do the daily task, much less double up on it. Sometimes it is wise to shorten the school day for convalescent children, allowing them to attend morning one day and afternoon the next for a time.

Intelligent children will, in their own good time, make up their lost work. The child who is not ready for the required learning will, when granted time for development of the needed power, get along nicely.

Pressure on a child never yet helped him to learn anything.

AN Easter bonnet isn't merely a new hat to wear to church next Sunday or to promenade in an afternoon Easter parade. It is a millinery concoction to glorify an entire wardrobe, not only for the next few weeks but throughout the summer. It is bigger, more festive, and certainly more important to the entire costume than any hat has been for the last decade.

Whether the "more hat" trend proves to be becoming depends on the individual purchaser. Many a woman who goes shopping for a new chapeau this season will discover very quickly that the first hat she put on her head isn't a flattering one. Styles definitely have changed, so it takes experimentation to determine which one of the many shapes and types is the one to buy. Wider brims and sheer materials contribute to becomingness. Pretty shades also are effective. Illustrated are some of the latest modes, suitable not only for Easter but for wear throughout the late spring and summer.

1—Silk organza flower petals in a pale champagne tone cover this handsome hat made of matching hairbraids. A Hattie Carnegie design, the hat has a drooping brim that is wider at the front and sides than at the back. The hat has a bandeau that holds it firmly to the head.

2—Navy blue maline is draped around the crown and also the drooping brim of this Chanda model of navy hair-braid. Little rhinestone drops are tacked to the maline to provide glitter. This hat is one of the deep-set models that usually are becoming to the majority of women.

3—The dome shape shown here is another becoming example of the heavier hat for spring. Made of ballybunt straw, it has pleated chiffon covering the entire mushroom brim. A deep bandeau permits the hat to be higher on the head. Several shades including apricot and turquoise are available in addition to white.

4—This is one of the new transparent hats destined to be extremely popular during the next few months. A Bernard Wortman design, it has a brim of starched veiling attached to a disc-like crown of rough black straw. Little bows and a fluting of the veiling edge the crown. The brim has a flattering flange edge.

5—Leslie James uses lacquered cream colored leaves to form a very full garland around a peach-basket shape. The straw also suggests the basket effect as it is loosely woven in a natural straw tone. A bias band of cream colored satin circles the flat crown.

Words, Wit And Wisdom

By William Morris

Word Game.

TODAY'S vocabulary test is based upon 10 fairly common words. Most of them will give you little trouble but be on the watch for two or three tricky ones. For each numbered word you will find a word of almost the same meaning among the three words and phrases following it. Thus the word numbered 1 may mean practically the same as the word lettered b. Write this down as 1b.

When you have all the answers, check against the correct pairings at the bottom. Score 10 points for each correct answer—100 is excellent; 80 or 90, superior; 60 or 70, fair.

1. Catamaran: (a) wildcat; (b) twin-hulled boat; (c) vicious European leopard.
2. Daft: (a) left-handed; (b) dextrous; (c) weak-headed.
3. Chignon: (a) ribbons and laces; (b) kind of lemon pie; (c) coil of woman's hair.
4. Demur: (a) forbid; (b) be very modest; (c) hesitate.
5. Chiffonier: (a) pastry-maker; (b) chest of drawers; (c) lady's undergarment.
6. Delinquent: (a) melt away; (b) convert to hard currency; (c) regard as delinquent.
7. Counterpane: (a) bedspread; (b) storm windows; (c) military tactic.
8. Defalcate: (a) embezzle; (b) amputate; (c) guarantee the worth of common stocks.
9. Covenant: (a) church roof; (b) solemn agreement; (c) unlikely fellow.
10. Defenestration: (a) chopping down forests; (b) cloudy weather; (c) jumping out of a window.

Answer (With Pronunciations).
1b (kat-uh-muh-RAN); 2c (DAFT); 3c (SHEEN-yon); 4c (dih-MER); 5b (shif-uh-NEER); 6a (del-ih-KWESS); 7a (KOWN-ter-payn); 8a (dih-FAL-kayt); 9b (KUV-eh-nunt); 10c (dee-fen-es-TRAY-shun).

'Explaining Away' the Resurrection

By Fulton J. Sheen

WHEN one is so unscientific as to start with a prejudice, one must invent a thousand separate facts for a thousand separate facts.

For example, if one does not accept the fact of miracles, one must invent in the life of Christ a separate explanation of His walking on the waters and His feeding of the multitudes. So with those who reject the historical and documentary evidence for the Resurrection. If Christ did not rise from the dead by the Fulton J. Sheen power of God which is His, then one must invent ways of explaining away His appearances on Easter Sunday and thereafter for 40 days.

It might be interesting to study some of these forceful explanations which are far more difficult for reason to accept than the Resurrection itself. A theory that found acceptance in anti-God circles during the nineteenth century is that Christ actually did not die on the cross. He was only in a state of shock or coma as a result of the agony on the cross; the coolness of the grave later on revived him and he appeared before men, telling them that He rose from the dead, thus creating the belief in the Resurrection.

NOW WHAT are the facts written by those who saw the events on Good Friday and Easter, and later on had their throats slashed for that belief? First of all, there was a double investigation into the certitude of His death, one by Jewish authorities, the other by Roman authorities. Both arrived at the same conclusion.

Furthermore, the Roman centurion who had charge of the execution, knowing that the two thieves were not dead, broke their bones. As a final insult, he ran a spear into the side of Christ, blood and water pouring out to witness the complete cessation of heart action. Incidentally, it was at that moment that he who was a pagan became the second fruit of the tree of the cross—the thief being the first—as he exclaimed, "Indeed, This is the Son of God."

Even though death had not taken place after the violent scourging, crowning with thorns and being nailed to the cross, He would have suffocated when buried in 100 pounds of spices as was the custom. But the most surprising part of the theory is that He walked with such strength on the third day, and for the subsequent 40 days, as to convince doubting, timid disciples that He was the conqueror of death.

Finally, what happened to Him when He "really" died if the theory be true? Where is His grave? Why did not His enemies point to Him and say, "He is not risen? There He is in the corruption of death like all mortals." In no instance do we find in the first century documents His enemies denying His death and Resurrection; we find only that they were told not to preach it. It was not the fact of the Resurrection that was in dispute, but only the telling of the fact.

LATER ON, those who tried to escape the fact of the Resurrection tried to explain it away on psychological grounds.

The new theory argued as follows: The Apostles and other followers of our Lord had often heard him say that He would be crucified and later on rise from the dead. This belief sank into their subconsciousness. On Good Friday, all their hopes were dashed to pieces by His ignominious "defeat" and death. The shock caused the subconscious mind to project into the conscious mind the illusion that He had risen and this illusion they preached as a fact.

This theory explodes immediately when it is recalled that the Apostles and others were not expecting the Resurrection. Certainly, the Lord told them many times, but did they believe Him? What were Magdalen and the pious women doing at the grave early on Easter morning with spices to anoint a dead body. If they expected the Resurrection?

Magdalen so little believed in the Resurrection that she mistook Him for the gardener. When finally convinced she tells Peter and John, and what is their comment: "A woman's tale." In other words: "You know how women are, always believing everything." When finally Peter and John were convinced, they had to convince the others and one of them, Thomas, went so far as to say that he would not believe until he could put his finger into the hand of the Lord and his hand into the side of the Lord. Only on doing this did he finally believe. On many subsequent occasions our Lord spoke and appeared to multitudes, even 500 at one time. There was no collective illusion here as there was no individual illusion among the Apostles.

The Resurrection is the central fact of the Christian faith. It begins with defeat, crucifixion and sorrow, but it ends in triumph. Sunshine religions will do for days without death, or grief, or sorrow, but it takes the Love of God entering into our tragedies to convince us that in Him we too can have our Easter after our Good Friday.

Contract Bridge

♠AK64	♥AK73	♦964	♣Q9
♠J852	♥9	♦A10832	♣KJ2
♠Q7	♥1085	♦KJ5	♣A7654
♠1063	♥QJ642	♦Q7	♣1083

The bidding:
North East South West
1♠ Pass 2♠ Pass
2♥ Pass 3♥ Pass
3NT Pass 4♥ Pass

West made the routine lead from his holding, the fourth-best diamond. Declarer captured East's queen, studied the dummy, and then led a low club. Success looked impossible unless he found the club king right in front of the queen, and in addition he would probably need a 3-3 break of the club suit.

Obviously, the clubs lay exactly as South hoped, but he still had to reckon with the superlative defense that West waged. West did not commit the too-common error of putting up the club king. He stopped to think. East had denied holding the diamond jack, (by playing the queen) hence, if East couldn't get in to lead a diamond through the closed hand, prospects looked pretty bad for the defense. With dummy's major-suit holdings what they were, the only chance was obviously in the club suit.

So West not only declined to put up the club king—he carefully followed suit with the jack. Dummy's queen won and the club nine was returned. East, with the 10-8 equals, naturally covered, and declarer felt doom approaching. He could not afford to let the 10 hold, since a diamond would be returned through the J-5, but going up with the club ace did no good either. West, noting East's cover of the club nine, decided that if declarer had a six-card suit—i.e., if East was now out—there would be no way to defeat the contract, so he played East for an original holding of 10-8-3. On that basis, West threw the club king on the ace, and now declarer was helpless.

European Trips Planned By Several St. Louisans

By Margaret Allen Ruhl

MRS. ELOISE POLK BENGTSOON, well-known St. Louis pianist, has accepted an engagement as guest artist with Concertgebouw in Amsterdam, one of the most famous orchestras in the world, the night of Sept. 28. The orchestra is conducted by Edouard van Beinum. Mrs. Bengtsson, who uses her maiden name professionally, will play Beethoven's Fourth Concerto.

Accompanied by her young son, Jock, Mrs. Bengtsson will sail for Europe Sept. 1, to be away at least until Christmas time. She will enter her son in school in Geneva, Switzerland, where she will have an apartment, and travel from there on a concert tour to European cities. Late in the fall Mr. van Beinum will go to California to become conductor of the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra in addition to holding his present post.

At present Mrs. Bengtsson is at 38 Portland place, home of her mother, Mrs. Oscar Johnson, and Mr. Johnson, who are in Palm Springs, Calif., with their daughter, Irene. They are due home next week.

A two-month trip through Europe is in prospect for Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Rosen, 2 Overhills, Ladue. Leaving here April 20 by motor for New York, they will sail April 24 on the Andrea Doria, taking their car with them. They will land in Naples and motor through Italy and France, including the Riviera, and Germany, returning in June.

At present Mrs. Rosen's youngest daughter, Miss Cary Croxton Green, is home from the Bennett School, Millbrook, N.Y., for her spring holidays. On Sept. 4 she will make her debut with her cousin, Miss Marian Green Shipley, daughter of the Walter Westerman Shipleys, at a tea at the Rosen home. Miss Green's sisters, Miss Marian and Miss Elizabeth, twins, are at Washington University, from which Miss Elizabeth, a mathematics major, will receive her degree in August. Miss Shipley is expected home tomorrow night from Centenary Junior College. Later she will accompany her parents to Fort Knox, Ky., to say goodbye to Walter Shipley Jr., who is serving in the tank corps and who has been assigned to duty in Germany. Miss Shipley will fly back to college April 15.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Woods, 48 Picardy lane, Ladue, has returned from a trip to Europe. The travelers flew to Germany where their son, Pvt. Robert E. Woods Jr., is stationed at Mannheim with the Army. With him Mr. and Mrs. Woods motored through Germany, Austria and Switzerland where they stayed at Arosa for skiing. After returning to Germany with Pvt. Woods, his parents flew to London to spend a few days before boarding a plane for home. They arrived in St. Louis Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley L. Lopata, 12 Dielman road, Ladue, will depart tomorrow to spend five weeks in Europe. Some highlights of the trip will be a visit to Paris, where Jacques Boue, chief engineer of the French Navy, will entertain them and show them the city; a visit to Mrs. Lopata's relatives in Haguenau, France, and a week's stay in Zermatt, Switzerland, for skiing on the Matterhorn.

In Milan they will attend the International Fair as guests of Dr. Vittorio DeNora, and in Vienna will attend the opera. After a week in Venice and Rome they will visit the Riviera and sail from Marseilles May 6.

Mrs. George Fabian Tittmann of Arlington, Va., arrived in St. Louis Sunday with her two youngest children, Julie and Paul, to be the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carl W. Messinger, 5139 Westminster place. Mrs. Tittmann, who will spend two weeks here, will be joined next Sunday by her husband, the Rev. Mr. Tittmann, and her two older children, Carolyn and George Jr.

Debutante Honored at Luncheon at Junior League.

MISS MOLLY DAINGERFIELD GOODSON, home from Vassar College for her spring vacation, was guest of honor today at a luncheon given at the Junior League tearoom by Mrs. Ellis Rhea Hurd Jr., 23 Willow Hill road, Ladue. Miss Goodson is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. McVeigh Goodson, 19 Pointer lane, Ladue.

Spring flowers adorned the luncheon table at which the 10 young women were seated. Besides Miss Goodson they were Miss Susan Moss, Miss Mimi Belz, Miss Susanne Woods, Miss Barbara Schlueter, Miss Mareth Sandrock, Miss Barbara Burton, Miss Elizabeth Holmes, Miss Sandra Humphreys and her houseguest, Miss Gay Dreyfuss of Pasadena, Calif.

Mrs. Goodson and Mrs. Hurd shared a separate table. Mrs. Hurd's daughter, Miss Julie Hurd, a student at Washington University, is in New York for her spring recess.

Home for Spring Vacation.

FIVE young women students at Centenary Junior College, Hackettstown, N.J., will be home for their spring vacation from classes Friday, to remain with their parents until April 10. They are Miss Marian Green Shipley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Westerman Shipley, 7307 Maryland avenue, Clayton; Miss Mary Cassett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis K. Cassett, 80 Lake Forest, Richmond Heights; Miss Jan Soest, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. John S. Soest, 5 Lombardy Way, North St. Louis county; Miss Lynne Slavin, daughter of the Benjamin Slavins, 15 Dogwood lane, Ladue, and Miss Alice Reynolds, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George C. Reynolds, 5 McKnight lane, Ladue.

Fifty Centenary students are planning to spend their spring vacation in Bermuda, including Miss Lois Korach, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Korach, 21 Fordyce lane, Ladue. The group will leave Idlewild Airport Friday, accompanied by Miss Bette M. Rhoads, head of the physical education department. While in Bermuda Miss Korach and the others will attend rugby matches, cruise on the excursion boat, Chauncey DePugh, to the island of St. George, where they will participate in an all-college day at Elbow Beach.

Mrs. George T. Lutz, 14 Lindworth lane, Ladue, and her daughter, Miss Georgann, a student at Mary Institute, are visiting eastern colleges on Miss Lutz's spring vacation. They will spend a few days at the Plaza Hotel in New York.

Mrs. Mary Gertrude Boerger, 5587 Lindell boulevard, and her grandson, Cicardi Bruce Jr., are guests at the Arizona Manor, Phoenix, Ariz., during the boy's spring vacation from John Burroughs School. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Cicardi A. Bruce, 11 Wakefield terrace, Ladue.

My Day

Community Indifference To a Concert

By Eleanor Roosevelt

NEW YORK. MOTORED to Hyde Park Sunday and in the afternoon we had a rehearsal at 3-30 p.m. and a concert at 5 p.m. for school children — a preview of the one to be given tonight by the Dutchess County Philharmonic Orchestra.

The orchestra has been lucky to find in Kingston a conductor, Ole Windingstad, who is remarkably good — a professional with professional standards. The orchestra presented two selections and "Peter and the Wolf," for which I read the text, was the filling for the "sandwich."

An explanation of the instruments and the composers was given for the children, and I thought the whole concert was well arranged for them. My two grandchildren brought two other playmates and all seemed to enjoy it. And since the concert was free to all school children in the neighborhood, we had a well-filled hall.

IN OTHER WORDS, parents would send their children and be rather glad to have them out of the house and safely supervised for a couple of hours on Sunday afternoon, but would not bother to buy tickets for themselves so they could go and learn to enjoy that kind of music.

Part of the reason for this is that they can get very good music on radio and television. But it is never quite the same as seeing people perform and hearing them on the stage. Furthermore, these small symphony orchestras are of great value for any community, giving pleasure to those who play in them as well as to the audience. I think it means much to a community when its residents take an interest in developing music in which they and their neighbors take part, either as performers or as an audience educated to appreciate the orchestra's performance.

I WAS SHOCKED to hear that when a booth to sell tickets for the evening performance of the concert was opened for a whole day in Poughkeepsie's largest department store, only two tickets were sold the entire day. And I believe this was on Saturday when the whole country comes there to shop.

This opportunity to buy tickets was advertised in advance and the tickets were not expensive. When you figure what this country spends a year on cosmetics, movies and other entertainments, it does not seem unreasonable to ask a community, growing as fast as Poughkeepsie, to support a local symphony orchestra.

I wonder if all other small community cultural efforts meet with such indifference.

Europe has fostered these community orchestra efforts for years and has produced a public familiar with good music and able to enjoy it. In this country, it was understandable that, when times were very hard, people could not afford to spend money on this—or any—type of entertainment. But it is not understandable now and it is sad to find this is so.

Spring Visitors In Kirkwood

ARRIVING here Monday for a week's visit were Mr. and Mrs. Douglas E. MacMillan and Col. (ret.) and Mrs. William S. Bryan Jr., all of La Jolla, Calif.

The MacMillans are dividing their time between their sons, A. Bryan MacMillan, 303 Way avenue, and Logan T. MacMillan, 445 North Harrison avenue, and their respective families. Mr. and Mrs. Bryan will be with his sister, Mrs. John K. Broderick, 360 North Woodlawn avenue.

Leaving here, the visitors will motor to New York where they sail April 14 for a six-month tour of Europe.

Mrs. Douglas MacMillan's sister, Miss Mary Blaine Tompkins, will come from La Jolla in May for a visit here with her family. Miss Tompkins moved west many years ago. Mr. and Mrs. MacMillan more recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Walker MacMillan became the parents of their second child, a daughter, on Feb. 19. The baby has been named Christy Gentry. Mrs. MacMillan was Miss Jacqueline McDaniel. Her husband is the son of Mrs. Walker MacMillan, now living in Lexington, Va., and is a nephew of Douglas MacMillan.

Arriving home Sunday from Wellesley College was Miss Sally Etherton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Murray D. Etherton, 840 North Kirkwood road. She will be here for 10 days.

Mrs. Etherton and Mrs. Paul B. Prough, 8 Finley road, returned recently from Tulsa, Okla., where they attended the opening of a showing of oil and pastel paintings done by Mrs. Etherton's sister, Mrs. William Milton Finley, at Philbrook Art Museum. Mrs. Finley, who has visited here often, paints under the name of Ruth Finley.

Mrs. C. Kenneth Smith of Tulsa gave a party for the visitors who stayed with Mrs. Etherton's parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Wakefield.

Kappa Gamma Phi To Celebrate Anniversary

By Fay Profilet

KAPPA GAMMA PHI, national scholastic and activity society of Catholic College Women, will mark its thirtieth anniversary at a luncheon next Wednesday at noon at Hotel Statler. Charles Van Ravensway, director of Missouri Historical Society, will speak on "St. Louis, the Gateway to the West." Mrs. Edwin G. Eigel is chairman of the meeting.

One hundred presidents and deans of Catholic colleges and universities of the United States affiliated with Kappa Gamma Phi will be present for the luncheon. They will be in St. Louis next week for the National Catholic Educational Association convention. Archbishop Joseph E. Ritter will also be a guest.

Mrs. Paul J. Babbitt, Flagstaff, Ariz., national president of the society, will be here for the luncheon. Mrs. John J. Horgan of St. Louis is national secretary and Miss Theresa Shea is president of the local chapter.

Mrs. Edwin Murray will be guest speaker for a meeting of the Tuesday Literary Club of St. Louis to be held at the Artists' Guild Tuesday at 2 p.m. Her subject will be "Poetry of the Old Testament." Mrs. A. J. Gummehelmer, program chairman, will introduce the speaker. Mrs. Joseph A. Quinn, president, will conduct the business meeting preceding the program.

The Women's Chamber of Commerce of St. Louis will meet at Hotel De Soto at 11 a.m. April 5 with the president, Mrs. Emery L. Camfield, presiding at the business session. Luncheon will follow at 12:30 p.m. Mrs. George P. Johannes, program chairman, will introduce the guest speaker, Charles Aguilar of the Social Planning Council.

A Mayrose SPECIAL FOR A SPECIAL EASTER DINNER...

Sweet-Spice Glaze

...ready to spread, FREE in every Ready-To-Eat Mayrose Ham

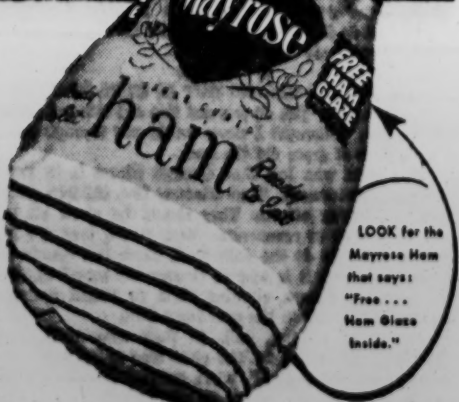

Two generous packages with each whole ham...one with each half ham

Some folks think, when you get a good thing, you ought to leave it be. And people do tell us Mayrose is such a good ham... sweet and tender as young corn... with center-slice flavor through and through. Just lately, we started removing more of the tough shank skin and trimming off the extra fat. And folks said that made the ham even better. That's our specialty... making good ham better.

That's why we created our new glaze! It's made of brown sugar, fresh spices and seasonings, blended to a tantalizing balance of sweet and spice. And you know the wonders that works with ham! The glaze is ready to spread as it comes from the package inside the wrapper of every Mayrose Ready-To-Eat Ham. No mixing, nothing to add, no bowls to wash. Just open and spread. With this new glaze, folks like Mayrose Ready-To-Eat Ham more than ever, judging by the orders grocers are getting. Yours in yet? Ask for Mayrose Ready-To-Eat Ham... the only ham with the glaze that's ready to spread.

Martha Carr's

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF. OPINION

Dear Martha:

WORK in an office with five other girls. One of them was engaged to a boy whom I had known back in high school but hadn't seen for several years. He started coming up to the office to pick her up in the afternoon, and when he saw me again he talked to me from time to time while he was waiting and one day he told me he wanted to call me for a date. I was pretty shocked, Martha, because after all he and she were engaged, so I told him I wouldn't think of dating him. He laughed at me and told me he would call me anyway. Well, he did the next evening and I talked to him but refused to go out with him. I made the very serious mistake of telling another girl at the office and she told this boy's fiancée. Now she won't speak to me and won't let me explain what happened. The boy still comes to the office and I always manage to stay out of the way. What can I do about this now? I heard a rumor that they are breaking up and she is telling everyone I'm to blame.

Yes, you did make a mistake to tell the other girl unless you were sure she could keep your confidence. Frankly, I don't know what you can do now to repair the damage except to make sure that nothing you say or do will give credence to the story. You're smart to stay out of his way when he comes to the office. The more you discuss it in an effort to clear yourself—although you have done nothing wrong—the worse it will become. Keep your own counsel and one of these days you may be able to make this girl understand exactly what happened. Frankly, this boy doesn't sound like much of a catch to me if he's trying to date others behind his fiancée's back.

Dear Martha:

I HOPE YOU CAN HELP ME DECIDE what to do. I belong to a bridge club with some women who have been my friends for many years. One of the women had to drop out because of her husband's illness so, since the next meeting was at my home and I was granted the privilege of inviting whomever I wished to fill in, I invited my next door neighbor. I haven't known her well but she always seemed pleasant enough. But that day, for some reason, she complained the whole time and made the rest of us miserable. We managed to get through the afternoon, but she wants to be a member and keeps after me to get her another invitation. Some of my closest friends in the group have criticized me for inviting her that one time and wouldn't think of having her as a regular member. What in the world can I tell her, Martha? It has become a very awkward situation.

I think you'll just have to tell her that the entire club makes the selection and that you will not have the deciding vote in the matter. Each hostess, I assume, would have the same privilege of inviting a substitute when she entertained and the other members may wish to meet several of them and play cards for at least one afternoon before deciding on their next member-to-be. The fact that you invited your neighbor once certainly doesn't obligate you even to suggest that she become a permanent member so don't let her persistence worry you on that score.

IN ANSWER TO Janet: I suggest you get in touch with the American Red Cross for suggestions for gifts to be sent to a boy overseas. If he is stationed in this country, you could send a book on his favorite hobby, a magazine subscription, fountain pen, handkerchiefs, cigarette case, lighter or money clip.

Send for Martha Carr's free leaflet of baby names. Be sure to enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request.

Good Discipline

By Ruth Millett

MANY PARENTS have the old-fashioned but still sensible notion that you don't let go of all authority over children the moment they turn into teen-agers. And they have found that the most satisfactory method of controlling them is through their driving.

held is indeed a fate worse than death. It turns him in an instant from a big shot who can go where he pleases, when he pleases to a kid who is no longer his own boss. It gives him plenty of time to think things over and to realize that driving a car is a grown-up privilege he has to earn by acting like a responsible citizen instead of like a teenage hoodlum.

It occurs to me that police who often find it almost impossible to handle the problem of juvenile delinquency and dangerous and expensive vandalism could use the same big stick.

If teen-agers knew for a fact that if they got into trouble with the law they wouldn't get off with a talking to or a fine but would have their driving licenses suspended for a period of from 30 days to a year, vandalism, stealing, reckless driving, knife-carrying, etc., might not seem quite so smart or so daring.

Put 'em on foot and see if that doesn't straighten them out in a hurry.

Beauty After 40

By Edyth Thornton McLeod

SHOULD a woman with very white hair use a suntan shade of face powder?—Mrs. O. L.

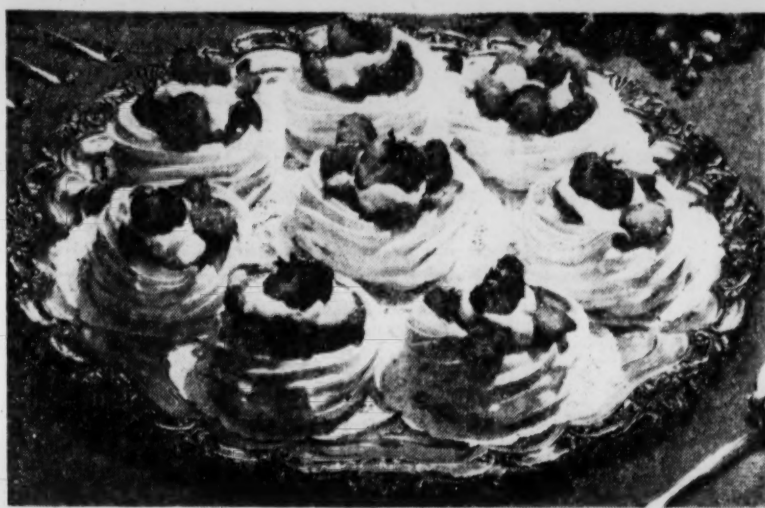

No, not unless she is suntanned or her skin is naturally that shade. It is true that pure white hair looks most attractive when the skin has a warm depth of color. However, many suntan powders have a touch of yellow and they should be avoided for that reason. Choose a face powder in your skin tone but about two shades deeper. This will give a very attractive effect.

"IS RED a good fashion color for summer clothes? I never invest in bright colors but somehow I feel I would like some this summer. I am 45, tall, average weight.—Mrs. A. K."

Bright colors brighten you and your outlook. I think that you can employ red very attractively by using it as a lining for a coat-dress ensemble. For instance, a pale gray linen sheath dress with a gray coat lined in red is beautiful. It is a very subtle way to get color into your life. Don't choose all your accessories in red but select a red hat, a red bag, or red shoes, and be sure to have lipstick to match whichever shade of red you choose.

Strawberries and Rhubarb Special Dessert for Easter

By Edith M. Barber

TEMPTING EASTER DESSERT TO TOP OFF THE FESTIVE MEAL IS A STRAWBERRY TAPIOCA IN MERINGUE SHELLS, DECORATED WITH WHIPPED CREAM AND WHOLE STRAWBERRIES.

OF course, we will have a dessert for our Easter dinner. If fresh strawberries are plentiful we may treat ourselves to plenty of these and serve them just with cream.

We might have the first shortcake of the season or, using fewer berries, combine them with berry juice and tapioca, and after chilling the mixture, serve it in meringue shells. The latter always add a touch of glamour at dessert time. A simpler dessert might be vanilla ice cream surrounded by whole or sliced berries. If the fruit is sliced it should be sweetened.

ANOTHER spring fruit is often chosen for that Easter dinner. Pink stalks of rhubarb that will retain their color if cooked in a double boiler with plenty of sugar may be used as a filling for pastry shells, or made up into our favorite two-crust rhubarb pie.

The early spring rhubarb is often hothouse grown. It is not as acid as most of the outdoor "pie plant." It generally has more color and throughout the spring months we will be using rhubarb for sauce as well as for filling pies and tarts.

If you like, rhubarb may be baked about 45 minutes in a moderate oven. It should be covered in order that the sugar may melt. And don't forget that this fruit must be well sweetened, if it is to be thoroughly enjoyed.

Strawberry Meringues. Two cups fresh strawberries. Two-thirds cup sugar. One and one-half cups berry juice and water. Three tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca. One-fourth tablespoon salt. Two tablespoons lemon juice. Six to eight individual meringue shells.

Slice strawberries and sweeten with one-third cup of the sugar. Let stand about 30 minutes. Drain. Add enough water to juice to make one-and-one-half cups. Combine juice with tapioca, salt and remaining sugar in saucepan. Mix well. Cook and stir over medium heat until mixture comes to a boil. Remove from heat. Cool 15 minutes. Stir in berries and lemon juice. Chill. Just before serving, spoon into meringue shells. Garnish with sweetened whipped cream and whole strawberries if desired. Makes about three-and-one-half cups strawberry mixture or six to eight servings.

Rhubarb Trifle.

One egg white, two tablespoons sugar, one egg yolk, two cups milk, three tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca, one-eighth teaspoon salt, three tablespoons sugar, one-and-one-half to two-and-one-half cups cooked, sweetened fresh rhubarb, eight to twelve ladyfingers, sweetened whipped cream.

Beat the egg white until foamy. Add two tablespoons sugar and continue beating with egg beater until meringue stands in soft peaks. Set aside. Mix egg yolk, milk, tapioca, salt and three tablespoons sugar in saucepan. Cook and stir over medium heat until mixture comes to a full boil (five to eight minutes). Pour a small amount of hot mixture gradually into meringue, blending well. Quickly stir in remaining tapioca mixture. Let stand 15 to 20 minutes. Stir. Chill. Before serving, fold in one-and-one-half cups of the rhubarb. Split ladyfingers and arrange in glass serving bowl. Spoon tapioca cream over the ladyfingers, top with whipped cream and the remaining rhubarb. Yield: six to eight servings.

The Little Woman

Warm Welcome Back at Sunday School

By Clarissa Start

Clarissa Start

ONE of the nicest things about coming home was the sign on the bulletin board in the primary department of the church where I teach a Sunday School class. A huge "Welcome Home" decorated with drawings of pig-tailed little girls and bright eyed little boys just like the lively six- and seven-year-olds we have in our department. All of them, 50 strong (especially in lung power) sang a welcome to the happy birthday tune. And one little girl assured me extravagantly, "I thought about you every day and dreamed about you every night."

Church was one of the things I had missed most although I'd attended some church each of the five Sundays I was away. The first week, it was mass at the Cathedral in Cologne. A cold rainy day, an unheated church, so chilled that even the organist wore an overcoat and muffler, but what a memorable experience, especially at the final moment when the boys' choir, the adult choir, and the organ music all joined in a glorious crescendo with the ringing of the bells outside.

THE NEXT three weeks we attended Lutheran services at the Bethel church in Bielefeld, the Martkirche in Hannover, the Cathedral in Ulm. I managed to follow most of the liturgy and was quite proud when I mastered "Vater Unser" all the way through.

The fifth Sunday, in London, we attended the City Temple in its temporary quarters where we heard an excellent sermon by Dr. Kenneth Waight, and found that it is absolutely impossible to sing a familiar hymn like "Rock of Ages" to a tune other than the one you know.

SUNDAY WORSHIP isn't dependent on familiar tunes or ceremony or surroundings, so that each of these experiences was satisfying. And yet, on the sixth Sunday, when I stood in the midst of the morning madhouse of coffee and doughnuts in the Sunday School kitchen, in the midst of the primary department, but later, in the midst of the congregations lustily singing familiar melodies, I realized how much I'd missed by being away.

In great part, I'd missed the crowds, even though at times you wonder if you'll ever get through the primary exodus alive. The churches we attended were not crowded, either in Germany or London. In Copenhagen, Denmark, we were taken to see a huge, impressive cathedral with a seating capacity of perhaps 1500 or 2000. We asked how many attend on a Sunday and were told an average of 25 or 30.

For our first week or two, we were critical. Then as we became aware of some of the experiences many of the congregations had been through, we kept silent. One evening came up at a discussion in a private home, one woman said: "After such a terrible war, how can you believe in anything?"

And I wondered if many of us Americans, proud as we are of our growing church attendance, would have reacted in similar fashion. If we had lost home, family, security, faith in our leaders, would we have gone back to the rebuilt churches with the same joyous belief and confidence?

I wonder how many of us would go if the churches weren't heated.

Enjoyable Suggestions For Teeners

By Elinor Williams

NEXT time you long to live a little, don't be a sit-and-wait-for-something-to-happen girl or guy. Start the fun yourself. You can do it, it's easy.

When you're faced with a dull, dateless Friday or Saturday night—or even a Sunday afternoon—pick up your telephone and dial several friends for some fun at your home.

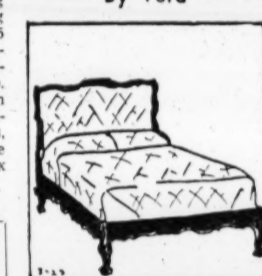

YOU don't even have to have an equal number of girls and boys and you don't have to dress up...at least not in top glamour stuff. Keep it informal and casual like this:

"Hello, Sue? This is Betty. If you're not busy tonight, come on over and we'll have a 'Practice Party'...brush up on our dancing and new tunes. Just wear school clothes, if you like, and if you have a favorite record, bring it along, but be sure to stick your name on it. See you at 8 and we'll break it up at 11."

THEN what do you do? Plan to change dance partners every on or two dances. Sit out every third or fourth dance and talk. Have a "Ladies' Choice" dance often. Let an extra girl or boy be the record-changer while not dancing. It's an easy-going casual kind of evening, not a real, planned, dress-up party. For refreshments, serve fat sandwiches of hamburger buns stuffed with ham or lunch meat, cheese slices, tomato slices, pickles...and anything else you want to add. Put relish, mustard, catsup and potato chips or a tray for everybody to help himself. Serve fruit punch (canned) or hot chocolate (a pinch to make with a chocolate mix). Sounds good, doesn't it?

It's an Idea!

Fix It Yourself

By Hubbard Cobb

When Equipment Acts Up. I N this day and age almost everyone has some sort of a complex and the complex that most home owners have is an inferiority complex. Seems that they feel no one loves them and no one cares what happens to them or to their house when some part of it goes wrong.

Well, last January we were out in Chicago for the annual National Home Builders Association convention and we found a lot of people who loved and cared for home owners. Among these were the sales managers of various concerns who manufacture equipment that goes into homes like furnaces, windows, kitchen appliances, air conditioners and the like.

They love us enough so that they become real upset when they think that one of us might be going around telling our friends that such and such piece of equipment is no damn good, that it never works properly and that no one seems willing to spend the time to get it working properly. Talk like this can be very bad for business.

Next time you have a piece of equipment in your home that acts up and you can't get any satisfaction out of the person in your community who is supposed to know what the score is, drop a note to the sales manager of the outfit who made the equipment. Tell him your troubles and we'll give odds that he'll see to it that someone comes over to straighten things out for you—and straighten them out fast.

Uncle Ray's Column

By Ramon Coffman

ONE day, while I was on a train going through the western plains of the United States, I saw a tornado cloud at a distance of perhaps a mile. It was a cone shape, with the wide part high in the air and the narrow end below, touching (or almost touching) the ground.

I thought of what might happen if my train was touched by the dark mass of whirling wind which the cloud contained. Such winds have been known to lift railway cars off the tracks.

Happily that tornado missed my train. When I read a newspaper several hours later, I did not see any mention of a destructive storm. Very likely the tornado struck barren parts of the plains with little, if any, damage to people, livestock or buildings.

HOW DIFFERENT the story is at other times. Houses and barns are destroyed, and cattle, sheep and other livestock are swept hundreds of feet up into the air.

People die in some tornadoes. A survey of 25 tornadoes showed that each of them, on the average, had claimed 80 human lives.

Q. Is it true that a tornado travels northeastward?

A. That is the usual path. You will be in danger if you are anywhere in the path of a tornado, but you may save yourself if you lie flat on the ground near the southwest corner of a house or barn. Then the building and-or its parts probably will miss you after being carried by the terrible wind. As I said previously, however, the best shelter is a cyclone cellar.

Q. Is it true that houses in the path of a tornado sometimes explode?

A. An explosion of a sort takes place all too often. A tornado tends to lower the pressure of the air. When the outside pressure is low, the air inside a tightly-closed house has an explosive force and is likely to blow the walls down. If there is enough time, it is best to open a few windows in a house before rushing to a cyclone cellar.
